Meeting at Columbus Productive of Good Results for Those in Attendance.

A SALEM MAN GETS A GOOD BERTH

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 11.—Senator Charles C. Connell, of Lisbon; City Solicitor George E. Davidson and City Auditor Willis Davidson, of East Liverpool; City Auditor Charles McGregor, of Wellsville, and the city auditor of Salem, were Columbiana county visitors to the state capital. City Auditors Frank S. King, of Steubenville, and Charles O. Silver, of Alliance, were also here. Senator Connell spent most of Thursday at the law library of the supreme court, delving into ponderous volumes in quest of light on some knotty legal propositions. This was his chief purpose in the city. He met some of the leaders. The foregoing city auditors and Solicitor Davidson attended the meeting of the city auditors of Ohio at which a permanent organization was formed. Auditor King, of Steubenville, was made chairman of the executive committee, and Auditor Silver, of Alliance, was placed on the legal committee. No other committees went to the extreme eastern part of the state. Fifty-one members paid initiation fees. All questions submitted at the meeting will be referred to the attorney general and his findings will be published and issued to the members. The auditors learned much in relation to their duties at the meeting.

Another Salem man has a political berth at the state capital. Reelie McDonald, whose appointment to be jailor has just been announced by Governor Karb, sheriff-elect of Franklin county. McDonald is a moulder by trade and worked at Salem many years, though he has been a resident here several years. McDonald was jailor under the present sheriff, but resigned to become an independent candidate for sheriff. He retired in favor of Karb, who was elected by a small plurality. The appointment is a reward of his services. Factional differences were largely responsible for Karb's success, and McDonald's refusal to align himself with the candidate of his party, who met defeat, and his subsequent espousal of the candidacy of Karb, materially augmented the unsettled condition of affairs.

KICK OF A MULE PROVED FATAL

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD LAD HAD HIS SKULL FRACTURED.

Was Injured Saturday and Death Ensued After Days of Suffering.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—Charles Ward, the 12-year-old son of John H. Ward, tenant of a farm near Millbrook, belonging to C. P. Rothwell, of East Palestine, died yesterday as the result of injuries received last Saturday from the kick of a mule. The boy and a farmhand were taking a team of mules to water when the boy slipped. His movements in avoiding a fall excited the mule he was leading and it whirled and kicked him. The hoof struck the boy near the temple, fracturing his skull.

ALLEGED TRUANT LODGED IN JAIL

Roy Green, Arrested By Constable Powell, on a Charge of Truancy.

Because he has persisted in playing truant, Roy, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Green, who were divorced last week, was arrested last evening by Constable Powell and taken before Squire McLane. A warrant had been issued for the lad's arrest, the charge having been preferred by the truant officer, William Beardmore. The boy was later taken to the city jail, where he remained until shortly before noon today.

The case is a complicated one, it being hard to determine whether or not the boy is really to blame for his continued absence from school. It is said older people have influenced him to stay away and that they should be prosecuted for it. Justice McLane decided this morning to allow the boy his freedom until Prof. Rayman returns from Wooster, when the case will be taken up again, and if the mother does not agree to take care of Karb, who was elected by a small plurality. The appointment is a reward of his services. Factional differences were largely responsible for Karb's success, and McDonald's refusal to align himself with the candidate of his party, who met defeat, and his subsequent espousal of the candidacy of Karb, materially augmented the unsettled condition of affairs.

The Central Passenger association has allowed a rate of one fare for the round trip on all railroads in Ohio on account of the inauguration of Governor-elect Herrick. This concession is for three days, beginning Sunday, January 10. The inauguration is on January 11. Columbus is getting ready to take care of the thousands of visitors from all parts of the state which the event will draw. A special invitation will be sent to every newspaper in the state to send representatives and they will be entertained in a very pleasant way. Headquarters will be provided at one of the hotels and a smoker will be given, to which Governors Nash and Herrick and Senators Hanna and Foraker will be invited. The entertainment of newspaper representatives by members of the local fraternity is a feature which is receiving more attention each year. The efforts now being put forth in this direction promise to eclipse anything heretofore attempted.

Complying with the wishes of Governor Nash and the members of the board of state charities, the heads of the various state institutions have agreed to modify their requests for appropriations so as to include what is actually necessary for the care and comfort of the patients in their care. To allow the amounts asked would deplete the state treasury.

of her son he will likely be sent to the reform school at Lancaster.

A Divorce Granted to Mrs. Andrew McCormick, of Wells-ville.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—Cora McCormick, of Wellsville, was granted a divorce from Andrew C. McCormick by Judge Hole yesterday afternoon, and the plaintiff's maiden name, Cora Peck, restored. The petition said they were married May 30, 1898, at New Cumberland, W. Va., and have no children.

Habitual drunkenness, gross neglect and extreme cruelty were charged, the wife alleging that on September 25, 1903, her husband entered a house at Wellsville and after abusing her with profane language tried to shoot her with a revolver and was only prevented by the interference of others. The wife said her husband had frequently struck and otherwise misused her. His whereabouts are unknown.

Roberts, the polygamist representative-elect from Utah to the Forty-sixth congress, became widely known throughout the country, has engaged as counsel for the petitioners in the pending attempt to unseat Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah.

The very intimate knowledge of conditions in Utah which Mr. Tayler gained in the Roberts case and the able manner in which he conducted the investigation have commended him to those who are making the fight against polygamy, and he is now to be associated with ex-Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle in the contest against Senator Smoot.

NEXT CHIEF MUST BE POLICEMAN

Interesting Point Officially Passed Upon By Board of Public Safety.

The board of public safety last evening announced that the next chief of police shall emanate from the police force. The statement was made in answer to a query propounded by a member of the press. That representative informed the board that the impression is general that the chief of police must come from the classified list, and in so much as the applicants who were examined and passed were placed on the list, they are the only residents eligible to the appointment.

In explanation the board stated that the applicants who received a grade of 75 per cent or better have no show whatever to beat the regular police force to the office of the chief unless the board believes them to be better qualified than the members of the force. It has been the general understanding that the four policemen, Dawson, Morris, Dunn and Auderheide, who failed to pass the examination, would not have the least chance of ever getting the job of chief, until the list of those who did pass is exhausted. The board positively denied this assertion.

KEEPING STREETS IN GOOD CONDITION

Matter Receives Serious Attention at the Hands of the Safety Board.

TAYLOR'S OPINION GIVEN

He Holds That the Ordinance Requiring Sidewalks to Be Free of Ice Should Be Diligently Enforced—The Matter Up to Service Board.

While in open session last evening the board of public safety spent most of the time in the discussion of the condition of the streets. Every member is heartily in favor of having all the sidewalks clear from snow and ice, and an endeavor was made to determine if that body has any authority to enforce the ordinance relating to the question. The more conservative members of the board decided that they could do nothing; that it is the business of the board of public service to attend to all streets and sidewalks, and the discussion amounted to naught.

It was the first meeting that W. L. Taylor had attended for several weeks and the first thing he mentioned was the deplorable condition of the thoroughfares—his hobby. He said that it was not the last time he intended bringing the question before the board, either. "I propose to talk about the streets until they are as clean as it is possible for them to be made. I know it is getting to be a chestnut, but I will positively advocate clean streets, no difference how tired you become of my talk. This town is getting big enough to warrant clean streets and sidewalks. There is an ordinance prohibiting ice and snow from remaining on the walks and I think we ought to enforce it."

"I was over in New York the other day and a heavy snow fell while I was there. It was not two hours after the snowing ceased until every street in that great city was clean. I think we should see that the streets of East Liverpool, especially the sidewalks are kept in the same condition. My idea is to give the notice and when any person violates the order, have the walks cleaned and charge it to the property owner. This can be done easier by arresting the violators and fining them 50 cents."

After completing his talk on the snow and ice proposition, Mr. Taylor mentioned sled riding. He thought the mayor should give the children certain streets where they can sleigh ride and it was also suggested that the mayor designate a street for racing. This is considered absurd by the mayor. He realizes that no board or body in the city has the right to authorize him to designate the streets for that purpose. He was given the authority by council, that body passing a motion at the last meeting authorizing him to suspend the ordinance, but he knows that he has no right to do so notwithstanding. It is argued by some that council can suspend an ordinance, but the mayor does not think so. He thinks that the governor would have just as much right to suspend the law prohibiting murder for a few days.

The mayor gave notice that he would not designate any streets, but intimated he would not prosecute the little ones if they do not go too far with the sport. He may give the racers Columbian park or Anderson boulevard.

ALIMONY GRANTED TO MRS. ALLMON

Court's Decree in the Case of a Wronged and Abused East Liverpool Wife.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—There was a hearing in court yesterday afternoon in the alimony case of Addie Allmon, of East Liverpool, against John D. Allmon and at the conclusion of the testimony Judge Hole decreed that all the husband's real estate and $100 should be given to the wife. The People's National bank, of Wellsville, in which the defendant had money, was a party defendant.

In her petition the wife said she was married to the defendant at Great Bend, O., April 27, 1886, and that they have five children, Jennie, Georgia, Katherine, Pinkie and Isaac. She charged willful absence, alleging that her husband had not lived with her for more than five years and by reason of his idleness had not contributed to the family. Mrs. Allmon further charged extreme cruelty, citing an instance when in September, 1895, her husband struck her across the side and broke one of her ribs, again in October, 1899, breaking her right arm in two places with a club.

The husband owned 40 acres in Lebanon township, Meigs county. It will be remembered he was convicted of non-support and sent to the Canton workhouse soon after the last grand jury.

ARE SLOT MACHINES GAMBLING DEVICES

West Virginia Attorneys Contend They Are Not Under the State Statutes.

Charleston, W. Va., December 11.—Another twist was given the local slot machine controversy yesterday, when Attorney J. W. Kennedy, who represents the owners and exhibitors of the devices, appeared before the Kanawha county circuit court and filed a petition asking that the confiscated machines now in the possession of the officers of the law, be no longer held and praying that they be restored to their proper ownership.

The petition contends that the machines are not gambling devices under the A. B. C. and E. O. statute, and renews the claim of their legality, all of which brings the cases up to the court on the merits of the controversy. The rule is made returnable on Saturday, December 12, at which time arguments on the application by the attorneys on both sides will be heard and a decision rendered.

NATURALIZATIONS MAY BE ILLEGAL

Interesting Steubenville Case Questions Right of Probate Court to Naturalize Citizens.

Columbus, December 11.—By the indictment of Joseph Ventola, an Italian of Steubenville, on a charge of procuring illegal registration, a question of vast importance has been opened. Ventola's attorneys filed a demurrer to the indictment that the naturalization was done by the probate court and therefore illegal and that under this Ventola was not guilty of any crime.

Judge Thompson has taken the matter under advisement, but no matter how he decides the case it will go to the supreme court and a ruling be obtained. If the demurrer is overruled and this ruling sustained by the supreme court of the United States it is estimated that 1,000,000 voters will be disfranchised, having been naturalized by probate courts. Among others whom the decision will effect is T. N. Darby, second assistant United States attorney of this district.

ROCK SPRINGS PARK AMUSEMENT COMPANY

Corporation Formed to Promote the Interests of the Popular Summer Resort.

WORK WILL BE PUSHED MOST ZEALOUSLY

The Rock Springs Amusement company has been incorporated under the laws of West Virginia and this morning a most important meeting was held in the private parlors at the rear of the South Side Land company's offices. Officers were elected and plans were made for the carrying out of the mammoth project of the company, exclusively detailed in the News Review about two weeks ago.

Judge Billingsley, of Lisbon, was present at the meeting and attended to the legal procedure of the company's formation. The officers are: William Hocking, president; John Vincent and William McLain, of Pittsburgh, directors; George K. Ahrends, manager of C. A. Smith's interests, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Hocking is a man of many years experience in the amusement business and will be a highly competent man at the head of the company. The company is capitalized at $60,000.

The company, as has been previously stated, is composed mostly of Pittsburgh parties, but there are some from East Liverpool identified with it. It is the intention of the company to give the amusement loving people of the Pittsburgh district one of the grandest summer resorts in the country and if the plans as prepared are carried out it will not fall far short in the anticipation. Though the attractions to be controlled by the company will be many, the most important will be the lake, which will exceed all expectations. Work was started on the excavation some days ago and will be continued until the beautiful lake is completed.

This company will have control of nearly every amusement feature in Rock Springs park and will spare neither time nor money in making it a great success. It is the intention of the capitalists to have everything completed for an early opening of the park and sufficient men will be employed by them to effect that end.

A PLUGGED WELL AND A $10,000 SUIT

Interesting Case Brought By Clarence Kountz Regarding a Yellow Creek Oil Lease.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—The case of Clarence Kountz versus J. A. Crowley et al came on for trial yesterday. The plaintiff sues for $5,000 damages for an alleged violation of contract on the part of the defendants.

Kountz alleges that on September 28, 1899, he leased to the defendant 2.03 acres in Yellow Creek township, licensing him to operate on the premises for oil and gas and that the defendant, after finding a good pressure of gas, plugged the well and refused to utilize it or explore the territory.

This town is getting big enough to warrant clean streets and sidewalks. There is an ordinance prohibiting ice and snow from remaining on the walks and I think we ought to enforce it."

"I was over in New York the other day and a heavy snow fell while I was there. It was not two hours after the snowing ceased until every street in that great city was clean. I think we should see that the streets of East Liverpool, especially the sidewalks are kept in the same condition. My idea is to give the notice and when any person violates the order, have the walks cleaned and charge it to the property owner. This can be done easier by arresting the violators and fining them 50 cents."

After completing his talk on the snow and ice proposition, Mr. Taylor mentioned sled riding. He thought the mayor should give the children certain streets where they can sleigh and it was also suggested that the mayor designate a street for racing. This is considered absurd by the mayor. He realizes that no board or body in the city has the right to authorize him to designate the streets for that purpose. He was given the authority by council, that body passing a motion at the last meeting authorizing him to suspend the ordinance, but he knows that he has no right to do so notwithstanding. It is argued by some that council can suspend an ordinance, but the mayor does not think so. He thinks that the governor would have just as much right to suspend the law prohibiting murder for a few days.

The mayor gave notice that he would not designate any streets, but intimated he would not prosecute the little ones if they do not go too far with the sport. He may give the racers Columbian park or Anderson boulevard.

ALIMONY GRANTED TO MRS. ALLMON

Court's Decree in the Case of a Wronged and Abused East Liverpool Wife.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—There was a hearing in court yesterday afternoon in the alimony case of Addie Allmon, of East Liverpool, against John D. Allmon and at the conclusion of the testimony Judge Hole decreed that all the husband's real estate and $100 should be given to the wife. The People's National bank, of Wellsville, in which the defendant had money, was a party defendant.

In her petition the wife said she was married to the defendant at Great Bend, O., April 27, 1886, and that they have five children, Jennie, Georgia, Katherine, Pinkie and Isaac. She charged willful absence, alleging that her husband had not lived with her for more than five years and by reason of his idleness had not contributed to the family. Mrs. Allmon further charged extreme cruelty, citing an instance when in September, 1895, her husband struck her across the side and broke one of her ribs, again in October, 1899, breaking her right arm in two places with a club.

The husband owned 40 acres in Lebanon township, Meigs county. It will be remembered he was convicted of non-support and sent to the Canton workhouse soon after the last grand jury.

ARE SLOT MACHINES GAMBLING DEVICES

West Virginia Attorneys Contend They Are Not Under the State Statutes.

Charleston, W. Va., December 11.—Another twist was given the local slot machine controversy yesterday, when Attorney J. W. Kennedy, who represents the owners and exhibitors of the devices, appeared before the Kanawha county circuit court and filed a petition asking that the confiscated machines now in the possession of the officers of the law, be no longer held and praying that they be restored to their proper ownership.

The petition contends that the machines are not gambling devices under the A. B. C. and E. O. statute, and renews the claim of their legality, all of which brings the cases up to the court on the merits of the controversy. The rule is made returnable on Saturday, December 12, at which time arguments on the application by the attorneys on both sides will be heard and a decision rendered.

NATURALIZATIONS MAY BE ILLEGAL

Interesting Steubenville Case Questions Right of Probate Court to Naturalize Citizens.

Columbus, December 11.—By the indictment of Joseph Ventola, an Italian of Steubenville, on a charge of procuring illegal registration, a question of vast importance has been opened. Ventola's attorneys filed a demurrer to the indictment that the naturalization was done by the probate court and therefore illegal and that under this Ventola was not guilty of any crime.

Judge Thompson has taken the matter under advisement, but no matter how he decides the case it will go to the supreme court and a ruling be obtained. If the demurrer is overruled and this ruling sustained by the supreme court of the United States it is estimated that 1,000,000 voters will be disfranchised, having been naturalized by probate courts. Among others whom the decision will effect is T. N. Darby, second assistant United States attorney of this district.

ROCK SPRINGS PARK AMUSEMENT COMPANY

Corporation Formed to Promote the Interests of the Popular Summer Resort.

WORK WILL BE PUSHED MOST ZEALOUSLY

The Rock Springs Amusement company has been incorporated under the laws of West Virginia and this morning a most important meeting was held in the private parlors at the rear of the South Side Land company's offices. Officers were elected and plans were made for the carrying out of the mammoth project of the company, exclusively detailed in the News Review about two weeks ago.

Judge Billingsley, of Lisbon, was present at the meeting and attended to the legal procedure of the company's formation. The officers are: William Hocking, president; John Vincent and William McLain, of Pittsburg, directors; George K. Ahrendts, manager of C. A. Smith's interests, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Hocking is a man of many years experience in the amusement business and will be a highly competent man at the head of the company. The company is capitalized at $60,000.

The company, as has been previously stated, is composed mostly of Pittsburg parties, but there are some from East Liverpool identified with it. It is the intention of the company to give the amusement loving people of the Pittsburg district one of the grandest summer resorts in the country and if the plans as prepared are carried out it will not fall far short in the anticipation. Though the attractions to be controlled by the company will be many, the most important will be the lake, which will exceed all expectations. Work was started on the excavation some days ago and will be continued until the beautiful lake is completed.

This company will have control of nearly every amusement feature in Rock Springs park and will spare neither time nor money in making it a great success. It is the intention of the capitalists to have everything completed for an early opening of the park and sufficient men will be employed by them to effect that end.

A PLUGGED WELL AND A $10,000 SUIT

Interesting Case Brought By Clarence Kountz Regarding a Yellow Creek Oil Lease.

Lisbon, December 11.—(Special.)—The case of Clarence Kountz versus J. A. Crowley et al came on for trial yesterday. The plaintiff sues for $5,000 damages for an alleged violation of contract on the part of the defendants.

Kountz alleges that on September 28, 1899, he leased to the defendant 2.03 acres in Yellow Creek township, licensing him to operate on the premises for oil and gas and that the defendant, after finding a good pressure of gas, plugged the well and refused to utilize it or explore the territory.

After several witnesses had been examined the parties agreed on terms of settlement yesterday afternoon and the jury was excused until next Monday.

POWELL IN JAIL

The Accused Young Man Failed to Secure the Required $500 Bail.

Thomas Powell, who was arrested Wednesday night on a paternity charge, and whose hearing, set for this morning, was continued, is now confined in a cell at the city jail. Upon continuing the case this morning Squire McLane fixed the defendant's bond at $500. Constable Powell was out of the city and the prisoner was turned over to Officer McDermott. The latter escorted Powell to many places to give him a chance to get a bondsman, but he was unsuccessful and the officer locked him up.

A pin was driven through the hand between the middle fingers, making an ugly wound.

SHUT DOWN AT WHEELING.

It is learned from a reliable source that on Wednesday next all the Wheeling pottery plants will be closed down for a couple of weeks and possibly longer. The shut down will be for the holidays, and to make a number of repairs that are needed. It is possible that the plants may be closed considerably longer, as this is usually the dull season of the year.

At the Warwick plant a couple of new kilns will be built and considerable other repair work done, while at the Wheeling Pottery company's plant considerable repair work will be attended to.

The potteries have not been running very steadily since last summer, and a great many of the employees are of the opinion there will be a general shut down for quite a while. All the potteries have large stocks of ware on hands and can afford to lay idle for a couple of months at least.

NO REDUCTION IN MINERS' PAY

The Predicted Outcome of Coming Convention of East Ohio Operators.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE

Is Not Altogether Satisfactory—The Reason for It—A Good Demand for Coal in the Eastern And Coast Districts as Reported.

Wheeling, December 11.—An official call has been issued to the members of the Association of Coal Operators of Eastern Ohio to meet in special session at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, at 10:30 a. m. next Monday to take some action in regard to bettering the condition that at present prevails in the coal trade.

Owing to the cold weather, lake navigation has been suspended, thus cutting off the strongest market and outlet of the operators of this district and this combined with the irregular operation of the iron manufacturing plants has practically left the mines without a legitimate market.

A prominent operator, or at least one who speaks authoritatively for the operators, Commissioner Patrick McBryde, in speaking of the situation last night said: "There are at least 7,000 loaded cars of coal now standing on the tracks from Chicago east without a legitimate consignee."

When asked if brokers could not relieve the strain the reply was: "Brokers are partly responsible for the present condition of affairs. They receive coal on consignment and hold it until demurrage begins to pile up, then they begin to become alarmed and sell at any price, thus both directly and indirectly cutting prices."

"The present condition of the coal trade is as well known to the officials of the miners' union as it is to the operators, and the operators have nothing to conceal or hide. The miners' officials could with the utmost propriety attend this meeting and would find that, contrary to the opinions expressed in several papers, there is no attempt to violate or ask for an abrogation of the wage scale agreement, which will expire April 1 next."

"It is true that at our meetings there have been numerous suggestions made to benefit the trade, but so far there has been no suggestion looking towards or asking for a reduction of the present scale of wages, nor has there been any agreement reached as yet towards bettering conditions. Whether or not any suggestions may be made at the coming meeting towards asking for a reduction or revision of the present scale of wages is something that cannot be prophesied. Such an action might be possible, but hardly probable, as it is the desire and aim of the operators not to violate or ask the abrogation of a contract after it is once made. In fact, there is only one time in the history of the Eastern Ohio operators when the miners were asked to accept a reduction in wages after the contract was once made, and that was in January, 1894, when the trade was demoralized."

While this call is issued for the Eastern Ohio operators, composed of 50 operators, it may be possible that representatives from Northern Ohio district No. 5, including Tuscarawas and Carroll counties, the Massillon and Coshocton districts, including Cambridge and Guernsey counties, and the eastern part of Pennsylvania, including

The coal trade is good or bad as the conditions in the general manufacturing line, particularly the iron business, is prosperous or bearish. Both prosper and suffer together. With the tendency upon the part of the manufacturing plants to hold up prices by curtailing production, the coal operators and the miners must suffer from the inability to find a market for their product. the largest and possibly the best market, the west and northwest, has been closed to the coal operators, with the consequent and necessary shutting down, or partially so, of the mines. Not only do the mines of Eastern Ohio suffer, but also the Monongahela river, Fairmont and other Pennsylvania and West Virginia districts, although these latter have to some extent a good demand for their product in portions of the east and along the coast.

No action will be taken by the operators before consultation with the officers of the miners' organization with whom they are in accord, before any suggestion toward reduction of wages or abrogation of contract.

ing possibly the Monongahela river, will be present.

The coal trade is good or bad as the conditions in the general manufacturing line, particularly the iron business, is prosperous or bearish. Both prosper and suffer together. With the tendency upon the part of the manufacturing plants to hold up prices by curtailing production, the coal operators and the miners must suffer from the inability to find a market for their product. With the closing of lake navigation the largest and possibly the best market, the west and northwest, has been closed to the coal operators, with the consequent and necessary shutting down, or partially so, of the mines. Not only do the mines of Eastern Ohio suffer, but also the Monongahela river, Fairmont and other Pennsylvania and West Virginia districts, although these latter have to some extent a good demand for their product in portions of the east and along the coast.

No action will be taken by the operators before consultation with the officers of the miners' organization with whom they are in accord, before any suggestion toward reduction of wages or abrogation of contract.

EAST END

THREE STORY BUILDING
FOR MULBERRY STREET

Handsome Brick Structure Will Be Erected Next Spring By a Stock Company.

The business section of the East End is to be adorned with one of the handsomest brick structures possible to be built, a stock company for the purpose having already been formed. Interested in the project are a number of well known East End capitalists and several from down town. The company has already secured the site, which is on Mulberry street, and the plans for the building have been drawn.

The first story will provide two elegant business rooms, each 16 feet in width and 90 feet long, the proportions of the entire structure being 32x90 feet. The second story will be used for either office or residence purposes and the third will be made into an elegant lodge room, with all the necessary ante rooms and a spacious banquet hall.

A prominent East End citizen, who is interested, stated this morning that the erection of the building would be commenced early next spring.

Bad News from Butler.

Captain William Terrence, of the East End fire station, has received word from a near relative, James Maxwell, in the stricken city of Butler, stating that one of his children had succumbed to an attack of pneumonia and that another one was dangerously ill with the disease. Mr. Maxwell is tax collector of Butler and is also a well known newspaper correspondent. He has often visited this city.

Fire Plug Broken.

The fire plug at the corner of St. George street and Mulberry street was broken Tuesday while the water mains were being flushed. The water seeped through the break and to the surface Wednesday and yesterday and it was found necessary to replace the plug. This was done yesterday, the section south of Mulberry street being shut off while the work was in progress.

Successful Social.

The social given last evening by the Ladies' Aid society of the Erie street M. E. church at the parsonage, was an entire success and the ladies realized a neat sum. The attendance was quite large and all enjoyed a pleasant evening in social pleasures. The affair was in the nature of a "chicken social," but other tempting viands were served at the supper.

Preparatory Services Interesting.

The services at the Second United Presbyterian church, preparatory to communion next Sunday, conducted by Rev. T. A. Hanna, of Steubenville, have been of unusual interest and the attendance has been large. There will be no meeting Saturday evening. Rev. D. W. McQuiston, the pastor, will preach both morning and evening next Sunday.

Interesting Meetings.

Interest in the meetings being conducted at the Free Methodist church in Oakland by Rev. Mr. Faultz, late of Pittsburg, is increasing nightly and large congregations are attending. Much good is being accomplished and the meetings will be continued indefinitely.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

John Waters, of Laughlin No. 3, has been on the sick list for several days. Clarence Benneum, who has been sick for several days, is able to get around again.

Miss Osa Sweiger, of Pennsylvania avenue, is seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia.

Charles Stingle, of Wellsville, is the guest today of E. W. Fegan, of the Wilson pharmacy.

Miss Jennie Ferran, after an illness of a week, is able to resume her work at Laughlin No. 3.

Howard Pascall, representing the Tri-Bullion Mining company, was an East End visitor today.

The clay hands at Laughlin No. 1 were loading today owing to a shortage of clay. No. 2 has been using clay from No. 3 the past few days.

YOUNGSTOWN & SOUTHERN WINS
IN A LEGAL FIGHT.

Petition for an Injunction Dismissed
By Judge Rogers And Contracts Sustained.

Youngstown, December 11.—One of Youngstown's ablest attorneys recently said and is in a position to know whereof he speaks, "The Youngstown & Southern railroad will do this city as much good as a two million dollar rolling mill."

The building of this road that taps two of the richest counties in the state, Mahoning and Columbiana, is hailed with delight by ninety-nine-one-hundredths of the people of the two counties, but as with all big ventures will be found a few "knockers" or chronic kickers. The management of the Y. & S. in a manner in full accord with the statutes of Ohio proceeded to contract for a right of way with property owners along the proposed line. After the contracts were signed several of the property owners evidently thought that the Y. & S. could be made to pay more for the right of way than the contract price, and proceeded to have issued by court orders restraining the railroad company from building the line on their farms.

These injunction proceedings were squelched for good and all when Judge Rogers rendered a decision in the case of Chambers vs. the Youngstown & Southern Railroad company and dismissed the petition in which the plaintiff asked for an injunction in order to restrain the defendant company from crossing his farm with their railroad. This action virtually carries with it the court's ratification of all on the contracts with owners of farms to be crossed by the Youngstown & Southern. The court

Most people are pretty busy in arranging for Christmas presents for their families and friends. This should not deter them from taking an active interest in helping forward the Salvation Army in its efforts to provide Christmas cheer for the less fortunate—to induce Santa Claus to visit homes he might otherwise overlook. Christmas is badly celebrated if the observance of it is made a selfish one. It is a time for generosity and thoughtfulness as regards others. Only the liberal giver knows the meaning of true Christmas cheer. Giving that is confined wholly to the family circle is not enough.

The trustees of the Carnegie institution at Washington have authorized an expenditure of $373,000 in grants for scientific research and $40,000 for publication during the coming year. While the Carnegie libraries, which have been distributed with lavish hand, are creditable monuments to the zeal of the steel magnate for the dissemination of learning his gifts for the encouragement of scientific research will be regarded by many as his most valuable contributions to intellectual progress in an age of great scientific interest and achievement.

Congress is likely to conclude this year, as previously, that the Ohio river can wait. That will be the case until public sentiment is thoroughly aroused. When that time arrives, congress will not dare disobey the popular will.

The public safety board reminds the public service board that it is the duty of the latter to keep the sidewalks free of ice. In view of existing conditions, it is strange that a reminder is needed.

Governor-elect Herrick is busy with the office-seekers. He will not be embarrassed for lack of candidates for any position worth having.

A Pennsylvania clergyman finds it necessary to keep a pistol in his pulpit in order to keep his congregation from misbehaving. What's the need of sending missionaries thousands of miles, when there are fields so near home that need cultivation?

Mrs. Soffel, of Biddle fame, is out of prison. She has not yet decided to go upon the stage, but that would be only characteristic foolishness on her part.

Chauncey M. Depew says nobody is rich who acknowledges that somebody else is richer. In this matter, as in oil, Rockefeller has the monopoly.

St. Louis has an organization known as the "unemployed men's union." It may fill a needed want in St. Louis, but nowhere else.

Two dollar oil is predicted by operators in a short time. That will make additions to the forest of derricks more rapid than ever.

The weather department is succeeding fairly well in getting up a genuine imitation of an old-fashioned winter.

Ohio Democrats are again lining up for battle. They can always find good reason for fighting among themselves.

A Grand Rapids alderman sold his vote for $80, and his brethren say that is too cheap to be respectable.

If you are smoking too much, let your wife select your Christmas cigars.

Santa Claus is not only busy, but is keeping other people busy.

OBITUARY

Edwin Cock.

Edwin Cock, aged 71 years, died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Charles Podwell, of Pennsylvania avenue, East End, from inflammation of the stomach and bowels, after an illness of one week. The body will be taken to Salineville, the late home of Mr. Cock, on the morning train tomorrow. The funeral services will be held at the residence tomorrow afternoon. All of the children, residing in distant parts, reached here in time to accompany the body home. Mr. Cock was born in England and came to this country in 1881, locating at Salineville, where he secured employment as a miner. He was known as one of the steadiest and best workmen in that town and commanded the respect and esteem of all. He was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge in the old country but never had his membership transferred.

Although advanced in years, Mr. Cock continued to work in the mines despite the protests of his relatives until last Friday, when he was taken ill. He came to this city for treatment but instead of improving, grew worse. All hope of his recovery was abandoned early yesterday morning. Besides a wife the following children survive him: John Cock, of this city; Mrs. John Wynn, of Massillon; Mrs. Henry Vincent, of Cambridge, O.; Mrs. Ralph Raffles, of California, Pa.; Mrs. Charles Podwell, of Pennsylvania avenue, and Mrs. Joseph Jackson, also of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mrs. Nora Mahoney.

Mrs. Nora Mahoney, aged 47 years, the wife of Policeman Michael Mahoney, died at her home, 320 Lincoln avenue, at 1 o'clock this morning from kidney trouble after a very severe illness of five weeks. For several days her condition was such as to arouse the greatest alarm and it was realized that the end was fast approaching. The funeral services will be held at St. Aloysius' church Monday morning and the interment will follow in St. Aloysius' cemetery.

Mrs. Mahoney was one of the best known and most highly respected ladies of East Liverpool, having lived here many years, during which time

OUR TRADE IN MANCHURIA.

Americans Given No Encouragement—Enormous Business in Beer.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 11.—James W. Davidson, United States consul at Tamsul, Formosa, who has just passed through Manchuria on his way home, says the outlook for foreign trade throughout Manchuria is bad.

"No encouragement," he adds, is shown to any non-Russian traders and Americans will be the worst losers. The chief American staples to suffer will be flour, lumber, cotton and cloth. The Manchurian flour mills are preparing to immensely increase their output during the coming year. Kharbin is the chief center of this industry. The Russian Yalu river lumber concessions, over which there has been so much difficulty with Japan, is preparing to kill off the American lumber trade. With the facilities granted by the banks in advancing money and preferential railroad rates for Russian products this is quite easy to do.

"The Russo-Chinese bank is carefully fostering the Saku oil trade, which it is expected will soon control the whole of the Manchurian oil business. Similar banking and railroad facilities have been extended to the products of Russian looms by the bank of Kharbin, which recently advanced $125,000 to a Chinaman who went to Moscow and secured an immense stock of Russian supplies of all sorts. Their sale is now being pushed throughout the country."

Mr. Davidson further says that the best outlook for American trade is in machinery, agricultural implements, preserved meats and spirits, with which Russia cannot compete. The sales of American beer in Manchuria are enormous. America supplied 100,000 out of the 150,000 barrels consumed last year.

Washington, Dec. 11.—The house adopted a resolution directing the judiciary committee to inquire into the official conduct of Charles Swayne, judge of the United States district court for the northern district of Florida, and to "report whether the action of the house is requisite." Mr. Lamar (Dem.) offered the resolution, announcing that he desired to impeach Judge Swayne.

The first of the appropriation bills—the pension bill—was reported to the house and notice was given that it will be called up today for consideration.

Policeman Dies of Wounds.

Cleveland, Dec. 11.—Patrolman Louis D. Weick, who was shot twice early Wednesday, is dead at the hospital. Weick was arresting Guattana Pisciotta for creating a disturbance, when the latter whipped out a pistol and fired two shots into Weick's abdomen, inflicting fatal wounds. Even after having received the bullets into his body and while Pisciotta was running away, Weick drew his own revolver and fired three times at his assailant before falling to the ground semi-conscious. Weick formerly lived at Elmira, N. Y., where his mother, Mrs. John Young, lives.

Most people are pretty busy in arranging for Christmas presents for their families and friends. This should not deter them from taking an active interest in helping forward the Salvation Army in its efforts to provide Christmas cheer for the less fortunate—to induce Santa Claus to visit homes he might otherwise overlook. Christmas is badly celebrated if the observance of it is made a selfish one. It is a time for generosity and thoughtfulness as regards others. Only the liberal giver knows the meaning of true Christmas cheer. Giving that is confined wholly to the family circle is not enough.

The trustees of the Carnegie institution at Washington have authorized an expenditure of $373,000 in grants for scientific research and $40,000 for publication during the coming year. While the Carnegie libraries, which have been distributed with lavish hand, are creditable monuments to the zeal of the steel magnate for the dissemination of learning his gifts for the encouragement of scientific research will be regarded by many as his most valuable contributions to intellectual progress in an age of great scientific interest and achievement.

Congress is likely to conclude this year, as previously, that the Ohio river can wait. That will be the case until public sentiment is thoroughly aroused. When that time arrives, congress will not dare disobey the popular will.

OBITUARY

Edwin Cock.

Edwin Cock, aged 71 years, died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Charles Podwell, of Pennsylvania avenue, East End, from inflammation of the stomach and bowels, after an illness of one week. The body will be taken to Salineville, the late home of Mr. Cock, on the morning train tomorrow. The funeral services will be held at the residence tomorrow afternoon. All of the children, residing in distant parts, reached here in time to accompany the body home. Mr. Cock was born in England and came to this country in 1881, locating at Salineville, where he secured employment as a miner. He was known as one of the steadiest and best workmen in that town and commanded the respect and esteem of all. He was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge in the old country but never had his membership transferred.

Although advanced in years, Mr. Cock continued to work in the mines despite the protests of his relatives until last Friday, when he was taken ill. He came to this city for treatment but instead of improving, grew worse. All hope of his recovery was abandoned early yesterday morning. Besides a wife the following children survive him: John Cock, of this city; Mrs. John Wynn, of Massillon; Mrs. Henry Vincent, Mrs. Harry Vincent, of Cambridge, O.; Mrs. Ralph Raffles, of California, Pa.; Mrs. Charles Podwell, of Pennsylvania avenue, and Mrs. Joseph Jackson, also of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mrs. Nora Mahoney.

Mrs. Nora Mahoney, aged 47 years, the wife of Policeman Michael Mahoney, died at her home, 320 Lincoln avenue, at 1 o'clock this morning from kidney trouble after a very severe illness of five weeks. For several days her condition was such as to arouse the greatest alarm and it was realized that the end was fast approaching. The funeral services will be held at St. Aloysius' church Monday morning and the interment will follow in St. Aloysius' cemetery.

Mrs. Mahoney was one of the best known and most highly respected ladies of East Liverpool, having lived here many years, during which time

PUBLIC WHARFBOAT

Movement for the Establishment of One at Wellsville Is Favored.

A wharf boat may be established here. Two river men visited Wellsville yesterday and consulted with Mayor Fogo in regard to the legal steps necessary for the placing of such a public convenience along the river. They want to place it at the Third street landing if the franchise for the boat can be obtained.

These men are officers of the Ben Hur, which is now lying at the wharf at East Liverpool waiting for a rise in the river. They say that if the right to place the boat at the landing is secured they will put a good wharf boat here with accommodations for freight passengers and live stock. Mayor Fogo expressed himself as being heartily in favor of such a project and all citizens spoken to also favor it. Solicitor Boyd will be consulted in regard to the matter. The merchants would welcome such a move.

MOORE IS PRESIDENT

The Board of Safety Reorganizes And Discusses Fire Department Improvements.

The newly organized board of public safety met last night for the first time since the resignation of Mr. Beacom. The newly appointed member, J. A. Moore, was present and sworn in. The other member, E. S. Martin, was present, as well as Mayor Fogo, member ex-officio. Martin was chosen president of the board.

The subject of purchasing hose, nozzles and other supplies for the fire department was taken up. It was finally decided to hold another meeting on Monday night and at that meeting have present representatives of the different hose companies, when the supplies will be ordered.

Last night was the time set for the

LOCAL JOTTINGS

Will Reed, the popular druggist, reports that he has had a large increase in the sales on the flesh-forming Mi-na and that his customers tell him that it does all that is claimed for it.

It is a fact that there are not nearly as many thin and scrawny people on the streets of East Liverpool today as there were a year ago. This is undoubtedly due to the general use of Mi-na, the flesh-forming food that Will Reed has been selling in large quantities the last year. He has so much confidence in Mi-na that he offers to pay for the treatment himself if it does not give satisfaction.

It pays to advertise articles of merit in the News Review. While Mi-na has been advertised but little, yet Will Reed says that it is the best selling article in his stock. This shows the advantage of News Review advertising when one has an article of special merit to sell on a "no cure, no pay" plan, the way Mi-na, the flesh-forming food and digestion regulator, is sold.

The following notice has been sent to the leading druggists in all cities through the country, among them Will Reed, of this city: "You are hereby authorized to sell Mi-na with the distinct understanding that if it does not give an increase in weight and cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles, the price is to be refunded to the customer on his simple statement that it did not give satisfaction."

"THE R. T. BOOTH CO."

Do not make yourself or your friends miserable because of your dyspepsia. Mi-na is guaranteed by Will Reed to cure this distressing disease and is sold with the distinct understanding that money will be refunded if it fails.

Several of them were present for examination, but the members of the board had other business and another meeting was decided on for next Wednesday night, when applicants will be examined.

The question of repairs for the hose house in the West End was discussed. Mr. Todd, who has the contract for the work, was present and was given some instructions. Quarters for a man and a horse will be established in the station there. The board adjourned and went to the West End to inspect the hose house.

NEATLY KEPT

It is in charge of city hall policeman, William Elliott, who goes over the whole building, mayor's office, council chamber, engineer's office, the telephone office, solicitor's office and prison every day they are used and sees that they are kept in first-class condition. Says he:

"I am willing to wages that there are mighty few towns of this size where they keep their jail as neat as we do ours, to say nothing of the other offices."

SOUTH SIDE

BATTLE WITH SNOWBALLS

Led to Stones Being Used and a Pistol Flourished—Italians Couldn't See the Fun.

A battle occurred yesterday afternoon between some of the mill boys and a gang of Italians located in a "shack" opposite the mill entrance. The fight began merely as a friendly snowballing contest, and the mill boys kept the foreigners within their quarters until they became exasperated. They made a rally and began using stones instead of snowballs, which line of battle was equally met by the mill boys, who again drove the Italians into the house.

The matter then assumed a more serious aspect, when one of the Italians came out with a gun in his hand. He did not get time to use it, as he was compelled to make a hasty flight, owing to the flying missiles. Finally one of the foreigners was secured and locked in an outhouse, where his heart-rending cries were heard for some blocks, until he was finally given his liberty.

After the battle was over 15 of the Italians went to the mill office and asked for their time, saying their lives had been threatened, which was not the case, as the mill boys were only in a spirit of fun until they had to defend themselves from rocks and stones hurled at them. Tomorrow is pay day at the mill, and it is presumed quite a number of them will leave for other parts.

The situation at the mill will not resolve itself before January 1, and no further communications have passed between District Manager Goldsmith and the mill employees.

In the Chester U. P. Church By the Special Meetings Which Close Tonight.

Rev. F. Carin S. Anderson, of Tarentum, Pa., who has been conducting special services in the U. P. church for the past week, will finish his labors tonight and return home tomorrow. During the two weeks of special services much interest has been created which will result in a number of additions to the church.

The ladies of the church, under the efficient leadership of Mrs. W. R. Gillis, have done valiant work of late in raising funds for paying off the church debt, and through the kindness of Mrs. C. T. McCutcheon, have been enabled to hold weekly bazaars, greatly augmenting receipts along this line. The church as a whole is at present in a most prosperous and encouraging condition.

A battle occurred yesterday afternoon between some of the mill boys and a gang of Italians located in a "shack" opposite the mill entrance. The fight began merely as a friendly snowballing contest, and the mill boys kept the foreigners within their quarters until they became exasperated. They made a rally and began using stones instead of snowballs, which line of battle was equally met by the mill boys, who again drove the Italians into the house.

The matter then assumed a more serious aspect, when one of the Italians came out with a gun in his hand. He did not get time to use it, as he was compelled to make a hasty flight, owing to the flying missiles. Finally one of the foreigners was secured and locked in an outhouse, where his heart-rending cries were heard for some blocks, until he was finally given his liberty.

After the battle was over 15 of the Italians went to the mill office and asked for their time, saying their lives had been threatened, which was not the case, as the mill boys were only in a spirit of fun until they had to defend themselves from rocks and stones hurled at them. Tomorrow is pay day at the mill, and it is presumed quite a number of them will leave for other parts.

The situation at the mill will not resolve itself before January 1, and no further communications have passed between District Manager Goldsmith and the mill employees.

ARE INTERESTED

In Match Game Between Imperials and Beaver Falls For $25.

Negotiations are on for a most interesting bowling match to be played by the Imperial team of this city and the Beaver Falls boys. If mutual agreements can be reached the teams will play a series of six games for a purse of $25.

As is well known in sporting circles these teams have been bucking each other for two years and neither have been able to decide conclusively which aggregation was entitled to supremacy. They played numerous games last year and this season have already met for two series. In the latter contests the locals won by a total of 38 points and for the season so far as it has gone are undoubtedly the victors, but the Pennsylvania lads feel that they can win out if given another chance.

The locals are positive that they have the best of their rivals and will not play them again unless there is a money consideration attached. When the last series was finished the Imperials gave notice that no more games would be played until a purse was agreed upon. This was not satisfactory to the Beaver Falls boys at first, but they are now agreed to play for $25 and the only barrier for a series is an agreement on where the first three games are to come off. The locals want them played at home and will insist on it. It is thought everything will be completed by the first of next week and that the first series will be played on the Imperial alleys before December 19.

The teams will play for the total number of pins.

GAME WITH ROSCOE COMES TOMORROW

A Great Contest At Association Football Is Promised at Rock Springs Park.

The championship game between Laughlin and the Roscoe football clubs will be played at Rock Springs tomorrow without fail. If a fall of snow necessitates it, the ground will be cleared for this game, so that the local supporters of football will be sure of seeing a rousing game under any circumstances.

Telegrams have passed between the clubs today respecting the weather, and it has been finally decided to play the game tomorrow without fail. The Roscoe people are sending their strongest team and are fully confident of retaining their unbroken record as the champion undefeated club, while the East Liverpool boys are just as fully determined to have the honor of lowering the Roscoe record. The local lineup is very strong, probably the best that Eastern Ohio can provide. The forward line is the best and strongest ever put in the field by any club in the history of East Liverpool. C. Aarons, vice president of the Laughlin China company, will kick the ball off punctually at 4 o'clock.

Interesting Series Bowled on Imperial Alleys Last Night to Good Crowd.

Rigby's bowling team played hard last evening against Capt. Wood's five, but was unable to score even one game out of the series. An enthusiastic crowd saw the contest and the series was declared one of the most interesting of the season. The individual scores follow:

AT THE THEATER

At the Grand Monday night the Wilbur Opera company opens an engagement of one week with matinees every day starting Tuesday. Of all forms of entertainment, opera is the one of which the public never tires. Therefore, it will be pleasant news that the famous company is about to begin an engagement. Their repertoire of 20 works covers everything from grand to comic opera, and the organization consists of a full double company, so that perfect justice shall be done alike to "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Two Vagabonds" and the "Bohemian Girl" and "Mikado." Of course, it would not be a Wilbur company without lots of pretty girls.

In act three, the street fair, the fun is fast and furious. Trick scenery, including the wonderful bill board, slot machine and table, and the side-splitting chase for possession of the magic horn and a vaudeville number by the Bradys and little Mamie Brady, carries the spectator to the mystic woods where peace is restored. The grand transformation scene, brilliant and sparkling with electric lights, forms a beautiful stage picture that closes the program. "Humpty Dumpty" will be at the Grand Saturday matinee and night.

In the stage production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the essential features of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous New England novel of the same name have been followed, and they are said to have been handled to extremely clever advantage. There is a laugh almost everywhere, despite the tender seriousness pertaining to Alice Pettengill's pathetic figure as the much loved blind girl and to her value as the central feature of the love story. At the Grand tonight.

His honesty, test of time and confidence on the part of the general public of East Liverpool and surrounding community for the past eight years has established beyond doubt that Mr. Hobson is the leader of his profession. Unlike the fortune teller and pretender, he asks no fee in advance, and absolutely refuses to accept same unless you are thoroughly satisfied.

Mr. Hobson does not depend upon his advertisements for success, but invites the investigation of a most exacting public, that he may prove the truth of his work. His name and vast reputation is too well known to need words to make it sacred. His work is his religion, and he is a gentleman in the truest sense, with honor and conscience—as well as sympathy—ordained to do what he does. He tells the truth, good or bad.

INVESTMENTS.

He is ever ready to help and advise those with capital, small or large, to find a safe and good paying investment. This he can do and asks no fees until the investment pays a handsome profit.

CONCERNING BUSINESS AFFAIRS.

He gives dates, facts and figures, reliable and important advice and information on all matters of interest in business transactions, lawsuits, contested wills, life insurance, damage suits, divorces, deeds, mortgage claims, collection and speculations, adventures, gold mining stocks, and all financial difficulties. Truly predicts the success or failure of new inventions, patents pending, pension claims, etc.; tells whether you will receive fair dealings with partners. If you care to know what business you will follow to be successful, where you shall go and whom to avoid; if you intend to make any changes or start in business, buy or sell property, or, in fact, take any important step, don't fail to consult Dr. Hobson. ## IMPROVEMENT OF THE OHIO RIVER

Its Champions Are Expected to Be Busy in Washington This Winter.

ADVANCE GUARD THERE

Col. Vance Active in Arousing Interest Among Congressmen — Chairman Burton Lends Little Encouragement—Effort to Get a Survey.

Washington, December 11.—Men interested in the improvement of the Ohio river will be represented in force in Washington this winter to ask for all that is coming to them in the way of appropriations for the betterment of that waterway. Colonel John L. Vance, president of the Ohio Valley Improvement association, has arrived here as an advance guard to look over the field and to confer with members of the house and senate who represent districts who are concerned in the growth of the commerce of the river. He saw quite a number of them, and also had a long talk with Representative Burton, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors.

Colonel Vance found Mr. Burton agreeable to continuing the improvement of the Ohio along lines already projected, but the chairman was steadfast in his position not to commit himself on the project of the constructing a channel nine feet in depth from the mouth of the Big Miami river to Cairo. Mr. Burton, moreover, took occasion to express the resentment he has long felt over what he characterizes as unjustified attacks made upon him and other members of the committee because of their opposition to that plan. In discussing this subject with Colonel Vance Mr. Burton said:

"I would like to have your association tell this committee how we consistently can appropriate anywhere from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 in order to carry out this nine-foot project without showing consideration to other sections of the country. I wish you would tell us how we can favor Ohio to such an extent without appropriating corresponding sums of money for rivers and harbors which have an equal or greater amount of tonnage. If we did what you ask for the Ohio we would have to report a bill which carried hundreds of millions of appropriations and would be certain to meet with the president's veto. This committee will be glad to be informed how we can provide for the nine-foot project and do justice to other sections of the country at the same time."

Mr. Burton said, with considerable emphasis, that he did not think it is right for newspapers and men who are advocating this project to attack him and other members of the committee and "resort to falsehoods about us, such as has been done since last winter." But Colonel Vance assured the chairman that the improvement association was not responsible for such criticism and deprecated it sincerely. Nevertheless, it is expected that the preliminary steps toward the nine-foot project will be taken up and considered by the committee this winter.

Representative Hemenway, of Indiana, and Representative Acheson, of Pennsylvania, have both prepared bills appropriating $200,000 for a complete survey. There is a sentiment in the rivers and harbors committee favorable to incorporating such an item in the bill that is to be reported later in the session. The improvement association will be given a hearing after the holiday recess, and, according to Colonel Vance, will not ask for anything more than a survey at this time.

In addition to that the association will ask for the construction of a new lock and dam on the Ohio river below Henderson, Ky., for which a survey has already been made and a favorable report submitted to the war department. It will also ask for an additional lock and dam on the upper Ohio, just below the Kanawha river. About $1,000,000 will be required for the construction of each lock and dam. Colonel Vance expects to spend a large part of his time here this winter in advancing the commercial interests of the Ohio.

TRIALS IN THE ALLEGED GAME LAW VIOLATION CASE

A Salineville Boy Wins Honors As An Electrician—Good Words for Consul Davis.

Salineville, December 11.—(Special.)—The case of M. A. Adams vs. Don Cameron is on trial in the village hall. Cameron was with the rest of the boys hunting on Adams' farm November 25. The case differs from that of Ludlum, who was acquitted Wednesday, and it is said entirely different testimony will be adduced by the prosecuting witness. The case is being tried by a jury of six men and witnessed by a large crowd.

Justice S. E. McCormick sustained the motion of the defendant's attorney to dismiss the action against John Ludlum by M. A. Adams. J. M. McGarry, of East Liverpool, was the plaintiff's attorney, and L. C. Moore appeared for the defendant. The plaintiff had rested his case when the defense moved to dismiss, and after the question was argued by the counsel the justice dismissed the action in a lengthy decision.

Word has reached here that a new electric generator for the Big Vein Coal company's mine has been shipped from the factory and will probably arrive here the latter part of the week. The mine can start as soon as the new generator can be set, as the engine and boilers will be ready to connect in a day or two.

Fred Lindsay, son of J. A. Lindsay and wife, who reside in Salineville, has been granted a diploma from the Westinghouse Electric Works at Westinghouse, and also won a prize of $100 offered by the company for special work. The young man is a graduate of the Salineville public schools and is quite popular with Salineville citizens.

All the furniture for the new bank has arrived and wood workers are setting it up. It is now expected that the new bank will open its doors for business January 1. Nothing can be determined yet as to who the officers of the new bank will be until the stockholders meet.

Patrons of rural routes running from Salineville are interested in getting up a petition to present to Congressmen Kennedy and Weems, urging them to use all their influence to raise the salary of the carriers.

Salineville citizens were much interested in the report that U. S. Consul W. R. Davis, of Alexandretta, had been assaulted by Turkish officials at the consulate in Syria. Davis was for a number of years a teacher in the public schools in Salineville and only resigned his position when he was appointed to his present position. He lived with his relatives at Monroeville, one mile south of town in Jefferson county. While he made his home in Monroeville he was in Salineville most of his time. He is a firm, resolute man, and usually acts with due caution. His friends here feel confident that he certainly had provoked or he would not enter into a controversy with the Turks. He spent a couple of months here last summer and spoke several times of his duties not being as pleasant as they might be, and about the insulting remarks made by the natives of that country. Before he left he told several of his warm friends that a contingency, such as has arisen, might come to pass at any time, and if it did he would take care of the U. S. consulate. He received his appointment from McKinley and J. J. Gill, representative from the sixteenth district. It is also said that R. W. Taylor was very influential in securing the appointment.

The case differs from that of Ludlum, who was acquitted Wednesday, and it is said entirely different testimony will be adduced by the prosecuting witness. The case is being tried by a jury of six men and witnessed by a large crowd.

Justice S. E. McCormick sustained the motion of the defendant's attorney to dismiss the action against John Ludlum by M. A. Adams. J. M. McGarry, of East Liverpool, was the plaintiff's attorney, and L. C. Moore appeared for the defendant. The plaintiff had rested his case when the defense moved to dismiss, and after the question was argued by the counsel the justice dismissed the action in a lengthy decision.

Word has reached here that a new electric generator for the Big Vein Coal company's mine has been shipped from the factory and will probably arrive here the latter part of the week. The mine can start as soon as the new generator can be set, as the engine and boilers will be ready to connect in a day or two.

Fred Lindsay, son of J. A. Lindsay and wife, who reside in Salineville, has been granted a diploma from the Westinghouse Electric Works at Wilmerding, and also won a prize of $100 offered by the company for special work. The young man is a graduate of the Salineville public schools and is quite popular with Salineville citizens.

All the furniture for the new bank has arrived and wood workers are setting it up. It is now expected that the new bank will open its doors for business January 1. Nothing can be determined yet as to who the officers of the new bank will be until the stockholders meet.

Patrons of rural routes running from Salineville are interested in getting up a petition to present to Congressmen Kennedy and Weems, urging them to use all their influence to raise the salary of the carriers.

Salineville citizens were much interested in the report that U. S. Consul W. R. Davis, of Alexandria, had been assaulted by Turkish officials at the consulate in Syria. Davis was for a number of years a teacher in the public schools in Salineville and only resigned his position when he was appointed to his present position. He lived with his relatives at Monroeville, one mile south of town in Jefferson county. While he made his home in Monroeville he was in Salineville most of his time. He is a firm, resolute man, and usually acts with due caution. His friends here feel confident that he certainly had provocation or he would not enter into a controversy with the Turks. He spent a couple of months here last summer and spoke several times of his duties not being as pleasant as they might be, and about the insulting remarks made by the natives of that country. Before he left he told several of his warm friends that a contingency, such as his arisen, might come to pass at any time, and if it did he would take care of the U. S. consulate. He received his appointment from McKinley and J. J. Gill, representative from the sixteenth district. It is also said that R. W. Tayler was very influential in securing the appointment.

THE PLOT TO KILL WM. M'KINLEY

Was Laid By Spanish Anarchists and Known Months Before the Tragedy.

THEIR TALK OVERHEARD

By An Italian Journalist Who Laid
Bare the Conspiracy—Diaz Was
Also to Be Killed—The Informant
Deported for Talking.

I am in a position to make the startling allegation that a high American official, then stationed here, learned months before the opening of the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo that the assassination there of President McKinley had been planned by anarchists in a Spanish prison at Mont Juich, Barcelona, and that in the event of President Diaz, of Mexico, attending the fair, an attempt on his life would also be made.

The information was brought from Europe direct to Havana by a young Italian newspaper correspondent, who served with the Cuban insurgents here, says George Eugene Bryson in a dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer. He was captured by Spanish troops and sent a prisoner to Spain prior to the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Spain. He was confined in Mont Juich Castle, Barcelona, where he overheard the plot.

After escaping from prison the correspondent returned to Cuba, being commissioned by a Paris newspaper to report the assembly which drafted the Cuban constitution now in effect.

Upon his arrival here he presented himself at the palace, seeking a private interview, and was referred to Major Casairo, then at the head of the government secret service and the local police. He told the story of the Mont Juich plot and offered, for a small consideration, to draw sketches of the anarchist plotters for the use of the Washington secret service, so that precautionary measures might be taken to safeguard the late president and other executives in peril.

Instead of receiving thanks the correspondent was summarily expelled from Cuba aboard a vessel bound for Vera Cruz, Mexico. Meanwhile Major Casairo sent communications to the Mexican authorities saying that he was a dangerous character who deserved to be watched.

Shortly after reaching the city of Mexico the young Italian was arrested upon an evidently trumped-up charge of having attempted to steal some diamonds from a wealthy Mexican. He was forced to serve a long term in the penitentiary, in which he is still a prisoner.

The party vouching for the truth of this story represented a leading New York newspaper as war correspondent in Cuba when the Italian journalist arrived here in 1895. He went through the Spanish lines to join Garcia's patriot forces in the field beyond the trocha of Jucare-Meron, and was afterward captured and court-martialed. While a prisoner in Cabana Castle,

Havana, awaiting transportation to Mont Juich prison, the Italian managed to steal the plans of all the Spanish fortifications of this capital from Colonel Gage, the engineer in charge, and to smuggle them out to the New York Journal correspondent. The latter presented them to the bureau of military information of the war department at Washington.

President McKinley ordered the then Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of War Micklejohn, together with Major Wagner and Captain Whitney, to examine the documents carefully and note their importance and cause them to be archived for reference in the event of hostilities with Spain.

This occurred six months before the war, but keen interest was shown in the data at Washington.

The name of the young Italian is Mario Victor Divizia. He was a captain in the Italian army which was defeated in Abyssinia. According to his own statement he was stricken from the army lists at home for having joined the Cuban revolution while enjoying a year's leave to travel without the consent of the war office at Rome.

While he was a prisoner of the Spaniards in Cubana Castle here, after his capture during a raid upon a Cuban hospital, United States Senator Money tried in vain to get the Italian minister at Washington to take some action in Divizia's behalf, but it was explained that by joining the insurgents here and overstaying his leave from active Italian military duty he had placed himself to all intents and purposes in the light of a deserter, and couldn't expect help from his king, who desired no friction with the Madrid government over matters of such a trifling nature.

Confederate Veteran Dead.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Major Norborne T. N. Robinson, of New Orleans, who has been ill here for a month, is dead. He was injured by a bicycle several years ago and never fully recovered from a paralytic stroke that followed. His wife, a daughter of General James N. Bethune, of Georgia, and a son, Norborne Robinson, Jr., of this city, survive him. He was a Confederate veteran, a member of the Louisiana legislature, city attorney of New Orleans and assistant solicitor of the treasury in the Cleveland administration.

Burned by Oil Explosion.

New York, Dec. 11.—Three persons were burned and a score narrowly escaped death from a fire which started in a paint shop of William Staats, in Brooklyn. Thirty workmen were at work when a big tank containing oil exploded and tore out a side of the building. William Staats, Jr., struck a match to light a gas jet. A second explosion followed and Staats, Harry Smith and Fred Anderson were seriously burned. The property loss is considerable.

Croup instantly relieved. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Never fails. At any drug store.

President McKinley ordered the then Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of War Micklejohn, together with Major Wagner and Captain Whitney, to examine the documents carefully and note their importance and cause them to be archived for reference in the event of hostilities with Spain.

This occurred six months before the war, but keen interest was shown in the data at Washington.

The name of the young Italian is Mario Victor Divizia. He was a captain in the Italian army which was defeated in Abyssinia. According to his own statement he was stricken from the army lists at home for having joined the Cuban revolution while enjoying a year's leave to travel without the consent of the war office at Rome.

While he was a prisoner of the Spaniards in Cabana Castle here, after his capture during a raid upon a Cuban hospital, United States Senator Money tried in vain to get the Italian minister at Washington to take some action in Divizia's behalf, but it was explained that by joining the insurgents here and overstaying his leave from active Italian military duty he had placed himself to all intents and purposes in the light of a deserter, and couldn't expect help from his king, who desired no friction with the Madrid government over matters of such a trifling nature.

Confederate Veteran Dead.
Washington, Dec. 11.—Major Norborne T. N. Robinson, of New Orleans, who has been ill here for a month, is dead. Bethune, of Georgia, and a son, Norborne Robinson, Jr., of this city, survive him. He was a Confederate veteran, a member of the Louisiana legislature, city attorney of New Orleans and assistant solicitor of the treasury in the Cleveland administration.

Thirty workmen were at work when a big tank containing oil exploded and tore out a side of the building. William Staats, Jr., struck a match to light a gas jet. A second explosion followed and Staats, Harry Smith and Fred Anderson were seriously burned. The property loss is considerable.

PRETTY XMAS THINGS

Lace Collars As Gifts

THE design given here for a collar is a very good one and may be easily worked by any neat embroiderer. Great care and neatness are absolutely necessary. A snip of the scissors where not required is enough to spoil a piece of work, and that often irremediably, for mending cut net is a task to alarm the best of workers. If, however, it has to be done, try to imitate the net with fine cotton.

Back your transfer pattern on to the muslin, which must be of a good quality, but not too opaque. Tack the muslin firmly on to the net. The next thing to do is to outline the whole of your design with crochet cotton. This must be sewed down with fine but strong sewing cotton. When all this is done, cut away the muslin, leaving the applied pattern on the net. In the first sketch you see the work begun in the different stitches to be used over the applique. The centers of the flowers may be left as they are in plain muslin or else filled in with lace stitches, the muslin having been cut away, or else the net may be darned in various ways. Around the edge of the collar when completed sew a narrow feather braid. If these rules are followed a handsome lace collar will be the happy result.

HOMEMADE CAKE STAND.

A Pretty and Valuable Present For the Housewife.

Here is something pretty and useful made for a dainty woman's Christmas present. It consists of nothing more than a cake stand contrived from three round wooden box lids, three bamboo rods and a liberal supply of ribbon. The lids are first sandpapered to a uniform smoothness and then stained a pretty green and varnished when dry. The bamboo rods are moderately thick, cut the desired length and given a coating of metallic green paint. The first lid is fastened to the rods about six inches from the top by pieces of wire passed through holes in the cover and rods exactly opposite each other, and the wire, which can be painted over, neatly wound and made quite tight. This process is repeated for each tray as it is put in position. Now take some soft wide satin ribbon and arrange it in the bows shown in the sketch. This gives the finishing touch to the stand, which is most useful to put cakes and bonbons on for afternoon tea or for a workbasket. The ribbon covers the wire in four places and should always be an effective contrast to the trays, which need not always be stained, but can be enameled or covered with silk or gathered crepe paper, or a novel idea is to enamel the rims a deep blue and paint a willow pattern design in the rounds, the bamboo rods a deep blue and the ribbons arranged bows of white and blue.

The Red Lobster. The question is often asked, says the Lancet, without a satisfactory answer being supplied. Why do lobsters and certain shrimps and prawns turn red on boiling? One reason may be that the black pigment of the lobster is an iron compound in the lower state of oxidation, which boiling oxidizes to the higher state. Red human hair is said to owe its brilliancy to iron existing in the higher oxidized state, and by means of reducing agents, such as pyrogallol acid or nutgall, the color may be modified. In short, oxygen is a great painter and probably accounts for the beautiful autumnal tints of plant life.

Every family should have its household medicine chest—and the first bottle in it should be Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Nature's remedy for coughs and colds.

AN AMUSING FABRICATION.

Self-Made Heroes as Common in Colonial Days as Now. (Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.) In studying up the early local history of the Ohio valley one is forcibly struck by the lack of reliability so often to be noticed in the accounts of important events reported by French officers. The officers from Canada who were sent out to serve along the line of exposed frontier posts were a set of hardy, rough-and-ready fellows, yet they never fully forgot that they were Frenchmen, and the spirit of the Gascon is prominently marked in the lives of many of them. One amusing instance of yielding to the temptation to alter the facts in a report is furnished in the document sent to Canada the day after the destruction of Kittanning.

In 1756 Colonel John Armstrong came over the mountains and fell on this Delaware town and destroyed it, returning with but slight loss. Immediately the French commander on the Ohio reported to the authorities in Canada that a large force under "Le General Washington" had assailed the town at Kittanning but had been driven off with considerable loss and that he now had troops in full pursuit and had no doubt but that the enemy would all be killed or captured.

This bit of bragging lying makes one wish to laugh outright. There was no truth in it except the fact of the English attack on the Delaware town. As to the rest of it, it was all a pure fabrication. Presumably the French officer nearest in command received rather hazy rumors of what went on that day up the Allegheny and found it to his advantage to put these rumors in the shape which they assumed in his report. He doubtless thought that, as he was so far out on the frontier, and as he had no person near at hand to question his version of the story, and as it was a long, long way to Montreal, he was safe in putting the affair in any shape he pleased. In view of the truth, his version is interesting.

C. L. SMITH.

The Sense of Smell. That we have not entirely lost the animal basis of judgment, the sense of smell, is proved by the fact we do tell ourselves very much of other people by the nose, often unconsciously. The blind distinguish their friends by the smell of handkerchiefs or coats. Unconscious sensations and unconscious judgments have their field. We know far more by smell than is supposed. Some classes have apparently become degraded in senses as well as habits, for their basis of social judgment is below that of the animals. Those who have had their senses keenly educated are accustomed to judge of persons by odors. Australian children possess the doglike sense of trailing people by scent, and experiment reveals that this is to some degree present in every one. Strong attachments are not so rigidly ideal as we like to suppose. There is a physical basis to all our likes and dislikes. It is this which underlies the demand of refined people that their friends shall be clean.

Why He Kicked. Say old chap, it isn't nice of you to say to me that V. One friend of mine always be willing to help the other." "But I object to invariably be the other." New York World.

Good for Children. The pleasant to take and harmless One Minute Cough Cure gives immediate relief in all cases of cough, croup and lagrippe because it does not pass immediately into the stomach, but takes effect right at the seat of the trouble. It draws out the inflammation, heals and soothes and cures permanently by enabling the lungs to contribute pure life-giving and life-sustaining oxygen to the blood and tissues. Dr. Armstrong, of Dallas, Tex., prescribes it daily and says there is no better cough remedy made. Sold by Alvin H. Bulger (only).

FOR LOVE OF WOMAN

Vermont Youth Assists in Murdering Her Husband and Disposing of Body.

CONFESSION MADE IN COURT

Victim Enticed to River Bank, Bound With a Rope and Chloroformed—Body Thrown in River—Lovers Return Home Hand in Hand.

Bennington, Vt., Dec. 11.—Levi Perham, a youth of 19, related in court how, for love of Mrs. Mary H. Rogers, he aided the woman to murder her husband, to the end that with the $500 insurance on his life she might furnish a home for the man she loved.

Perham was a witness called by the state in the trial of Mrs. Rogers, charged with the murder of her husband, Marcus M. Rogers. Perham admitted an infatuation for Mrs. Rogers. He said she lured Rogers to a river bank for the purpose of reconciliation, she having become estranged from her husband.

In a burst of well-feigned and playful affection the woman proposed that they do tricks with a rope which she brought with her. The husband allowed himself to be tied several times, each time getting loose. Mrs. Rogers suggested that Perham try his hand, and he bound Rogers securely, he says. From her pocket Mrs. Rogers quickly drew a handkerchief, which she saturated with chloroform and placed over her husband's face.

Then she wrote a note with these words and pinned it to Rogers' hat: "I am going to drown myself and no body else is to blame for my death."

To this she signed her husband's name. After Rogers had died from the effects of the chloroform Perham threw the body into the river. Hand in hand the two returned home.

WHAT A WICKED WORLD.

Grand Jury Appears to Be Only Law-Abiding Body in Nebraska.

Omaha, Dec. 11.—The United States grand jury brought in true bills against former State Senator Elliott Lowe, of Harlan county; Bartlett Richards, a cattle baron of the west, and all of the officers of his company, known as the Nebraska Land and Feeding company; former State Senator Frank Curry, of Custer county, and about 15 other indictments.

Senator Curry is charged with conspiracy to bribe Senator Dietrich in connection with the appointment of a postmaster at Alma, Neb., and the others indicted are all for fencing government land, with the exception of a few unimportant liquor selling cases.

Mrs. H. W. Benner, of Fairbury, Neb., called on Francis E. White, foreman of the grand jury, and informed him that members of a fraternal order were planning to take his life.

WILL SETTLE WITH CREDITORS.

Former Cattle Man Strikes It Rich in Mexico—Now Living in Fostoria.

Woodbine, Kan., Dec. 11.—A letter from Grant Gillette, at one time one of the most prominent cattle men in Kansas and who is alleged to have gone to Mexico several years ago, leaving behind him debts estimated at $1,500,000, has been received here, in which he says: "I will be in Woodbine within a few days." Gillette says he has made a settlement with many of his creditors. He is supposed to be at Fostoria, O.

Fostoria, O., Dec. 11.—Grant Gillette, who recently came here from New York, said he had, through his attorneys, arranged a basis of settlement with his creditors and would meet them in Kansas City soon. He has recently been successful in mining ventures in Mexico. He has purchased a residence in Fostoria and will make his home here.

Aged Husband Penniless. Pittsburg, Dec. 11.—Penniless and without friends, F. A. Snyder, the aged West Virginia farmer whose young wife deserted him in Ohio a week ago, taking with her all his money, estimated at $1,200, applied to the department of charities for assistance. He was given supper and lodging in Central station and will be furnished with transportation to his home, near Weston, W. Va.

Salt Company Settles Differences. Cleveland, Dec. 11.—After 18 months of litigation the case of the National Salt company against the United States salt company, of this city, has been settled in common pleas court. By the terms of the court's decision the United States salt company loses its identity with the National and the deal for its absorption by the National falls through.

Stepped in Front of Train. Ypsilanti, Mich., Dec. 11.—Lee Forsyth, aged 31, an engineer, and Charles Wesley, aged 45, a helper at the Lowell paper mill, were killed by a Michigan Central train. The two men stepped in front of a fast train while getting out of the way of a freight on the other track on which they were walking.

Smallpox in Mannington. Mannington, W. Va., Dec. 11.—The public schools have been closed and the mayor contemplates closing the saloons and churches on account of an epidemic of smallpox.

Dont Nail up the Rats!

Drive the rats out of your grain bin before you patch up the holes.

It would be foolish to nail them in. But this was the way science always tried to cure catarrh.

It patched up the inflamed and decaying surface of the mucous membranes with snuffs, sprays and ointments. It nailed up the rats—the catarrh microbes—and the rats at once ate their way out again.

This is why the old fashioned treatment seldom cured catarrh—why catarrh of the head soon became catarrh of the throat, and then consumption.

This is why so many women have lost health and strength and became chronic sufferers with catarrh of the pelvic organs.

A new method of treatment—a positive and permanent cure for catarrh has been found.

A powerful elixir has been discovered which, entering the blood, is carried to the nerve centers of the mucous membranes.

It acts directly upon these nerves, causing the mucous cells to expand and contract violently.

Thus the microbes which have become sealed up inside and which cause the congestion, and poisonous discharges, are forced out.

The mucous cells take up their natural functions, the inflammation ceases, the sensitive membrane heals and the catarrh is cured.

The rats have been driven out.

While this is going on the tonic properties of the remedy have revitalized the blood and restored vigorous health.

The new remedy which accomplishes these wonderful results is

Rexall Mucu-Tone

It is not a "cure-all." It is simply a positive and permanent cure for catarrh.

It makes no difference where the catarrh is located or how long standing. Mucu-Tone works through the arteries and veins; reaches every part of the body, and acts directly upon the diseased membranes.

We guarantee to cure your catarrh or give your money back.

Anyone can catch fish in California

Bait, a line, hook, rod and a little patience are all that are necessary.

There is good sport within a stone's throw of several of the largest hotels along the coast, but the best fishing is at Santa Catalina Island. Santa Catalina is the home of the tuna—Tiger of the Pacific—which attains a weight of 300 pounds and has been known to tow a boat for hours. The tuna visits Santa Catalina for only a few days in the year, but sea bass, yellow-tail and barracuda are plentiful the year round.

Santa Catalina is only three and one-half hours from Los Angeles and Los Angeles is only three and one-half days from Chicago via the Rock Island System. Full information on request.

PRETTY XMAS THINGS

Lace Collars As Gifts

THE design given here for a collar is a very good one and may be easily worked by any neat embroiderer. Great care and neatness are absolutely necessary. A snip of the scissors where not required is enough to spoil a piece of work, and that often irremediably, for mending cut net is a task to alarm the best of workers. If, however, it has to be done, try to imitate the net with fine cotton.

BEGINNING THE WORK.

Tack your transfer pattern on to the muslin, which must be of a good quality, but not too opaque. Tack the muslin firmly on to the net. The next thing to do is to outline the whole of your design with crochet cotton. This must be sewed down with fine but strong sewing cotton. When all this is done, cut away the muslin, leaving the applied pattern on the net. In the first sketch you see the work begun in the different stitches to be used over the applique. The centers of the flowers may be left as they are in plain muslin or else filled in with lace stitches, the muslin having been cut away, or else the net may be darned in various ways. Around the edge of the collar when completed sew a narrow feather braid. If these rules are followed a handsome lace collar will be the happy result.

HOMEMADE CAKE STAND.

A Pretty and Valuable Present For the Housewife.

Here is something pretty and useful made for a dainty woman's Christmas present. It consists of nothing more than a cake stand contrived from three round wooden box lids, three bamboo rods and a liberal supply of ribbon. The lids are first sandpapered to a uniform smoothness and then stained a pretty green and varnished when dry. The bamboo rods are moderately thick, cut the desired length and given a coating of metallic green paint. The first lid is fastened to the rods about six inches from the top by pieces of wire passed through holes in the cover and rods exactly opposite each other, and the wire, which can be painted over, neatly wound and made quite tight. This process is repeated for each tray as it is put in position. Now take some soft wide satin ribbon and arrange it in the bows shown in the sketch. This gives the finishing touch to the stand, which is most useful to put cakes and bonbons on for afternoon tea or for a workbasket. The ribbon covers the wire in four places and should always be an effective contrast to the trays, which need not always be stained, but can be enameled or covered with silk or gathered crepe paper, or a novel idea is to enamel the rims a deep blue and paint a willow pattern design in the rounds, the bamboo rods a deep blue and the ribbons alternate bows of white and blue.

The Red Lobster.

The question is often asked, says the Lancet, without a satisfactory answer being supplied. Why do lobsters and certain shrimps and prawns turn red on boiling? One reason may be that the black pigment of the lobster is an iron compound in the lower state of oxidation, which boiling oxidizes to the higher state. Red human hair is said to owe its brilliancy to iron existing in the higher oxidized state, and by means of reducing agents, such as pyrogallol acid or nutgall, the color may be modified. In short, oxygen is a great painter and probably accounts for the beautiful autumnal tints of plant life.

Every family should have its household medicine chest—and the first bottle in it should be Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Nature's remedy for coughs and colds.

AN AMUSING FABRICATION.

Self-Made Heroes as Common in Colonial Days as Now.

In studying up the early local history of the Ohio valley one is forcibly struck by the lack of reliability so often to be noticed in the accounts of important events reported by French officers. The officers from Canada who were sent out to serve along the line of exposed frontier posts were a set of hardy, rough-and-ready fellows, yet they never fully forgot that they were Frenchmen, and the spirit of the Gascon is prominently marked in the lives of many of them. One amusing instance of yielding to the temptation to alter the facts in a report is furnished in the document sent to Canada the day after the destruction of Kittanning.

In 1756 Colonel John Armstrong came over the mountains and fell on this Delaware town and destroyed it, returning with but slight loss. Immediately the French commander on the Ohio reported to the authorities in Canada that a large force under "Le General Washington" had assailed the town at Kittanning but had been driven off with considerable loss and that he now had troops in full pursuit and had no doubt but that the enemy would all be killed or captured.

This bit of bragging lying makes one wish to laugh outright. There was no truth in it except the fact of the English attack on the Delaware town. As to the rest of it, it was all a pure fabrication. Presumably the French officer nearest in command received rather hazy rumors of what went on that day up the Allegheny and found it to his advantage to put these rumors in the shape which they assumed in his report. He doubtless thought that, as he was so far out on the frontier, and as he had no person near at hand to question his version of the story, and as it was a long, long way to Montreal, he was safe in putting the affair in any shape he pleased. In view of the truth, his version is interesting.

The Sense of Smell.

That we have not entirely lost the animal basis of judgment, the sense of smell, is proved by the fact we do tell ourselves very much of other people by the nose, often unconsciously. The blind distinguish their friends by the smell of handkerchiefs or coats. Unconscious sensations and unconscious judgments have their field. We know far more by smell than is supposed. Some classes have apparently become degraded in senses as well as habits, for their basis of social judgment is below that of the animals. Those who have had their senses keenly educated are accustomed to judge of persons by odors. Australian children possess the doglike sense of trailing people by scent, and experiment reveals that this is to some degree present in every one. Strong attachments are not so rigidly ideal as we like to suppose. There is a physical basis to all our likes and dislikes. It is this which underlies the demand of refined people that their friends shall be clean.

FOR LOVE OF WOMAN

Vermont Youth Assists in Murdering Her Husband and Disposing of Body.

CONFESSION MADE IN COURT

Victim Enticed to River Bank, Bound With a Rope and Chloroformed—Body Thrown in River—Lovers Return Home Hand in Hand.

Bennington, Vt., Dec. 11.—Levi Perham, a youth of 19, related in court how, for love of Mrs. Mary H. Rogers, he aided the woman to murder her husband, to the end that with the $500 insurance on his life she might furnish a home for the man she loved. Perham was a witness called by the state in the trial of Mrs. Rogers, charged with the murder of her husband, Marcus M. Rogers. Perham admitted an infatuation for Mrs. Rogers. He said she lured Rogers to a river bank for the purpose of reconciliation, she having become estranged from her husband.

In a burst of well-feigned and playful affection the woman proposed that they do tricks with a rope which she brought with her. The husband allowed himself to be tied several times, each time getting loose. Mrs. Rogers suggested that Perham try his hand, and he bound Rogers securely, he says. From her pocket Mrs. Rogers quickly drew a handkerchief, which she saturated with chloroform and placed over her husband's face.

Then she wrote a note with these words and pinned it to Rogers' hat: "I am going to drown myself and no body else is to blame for my death." To this she signed her husband's name. After Rogers had died from the effects of the chloroform Perham threw the body into the river. Hand in hand the two returned home.

WHAT A WICKED WORLD.

Grand Jury Appears to Be Only Law-Abiding Body in Nebraska.

Omaha, Dec. 11.—The United States grand jury brought in true bills against former State Senator Elliott Lowe, of Harlan county; Bartlett Richards, a cattle baron of the west, and all of the officers of his company, known as the Nebraska Land and Feeding company; former State Senator Frank Curry, of Custer county, and about 15 other indictments.

Sensor Curry is charged with conspiracy to bribe Senator Dietrich in connection with the appointment of a postmaster at Alma, Neb., and the others indicted are all for fencing government land, with the exception of a few unimportant liquor selling cases.

Mrs. H. W. Benner, of Fairbury, Neb., called on Francis E. White, foreman of the grand jury, and informed him that members of a fraternal order were planning to take his life.

Gillette says he has made a settlement with many of his creditors. He is supposed to be at Fostoria, O.

Dont Nail up the Rats!

Drive the rats out of your grain bin before you patch up the holes.

It would be foolish to nail them in. But this was the way science always tried to cure catarrh.

It patched up the inflamed and decaying surface of the mucous membranes with snuffs, sprays and ointments.

It nailed up the rats—the catarrh microbes—and the rats at once ate their way out again.

This is why the old fashioned treatment seldom cured catarrh—why catarrh of the head soon became catarrh of the throat, and then consumption.

This is why so many women have lost health and strength and became chronic sufferers with catarrh of the pelvic organs.

A new method of treatment—a positive and permanent cure for catarrh has been found.

A powerful elixir has been discovered which, entering the blood, is carried to the nerve centers of the mucous membranes.

It acts directly upon these nerves, causing the mucous cells to expand and contract violently.

Thus the microbes which have become sealed up inside and which cause the congestion, and poisonous discharges, are forced out.

The mucous cells take up their natural functions, the inflammation ceases, the sensitive membrane heals and the catarrh is cured.

The rats have been driven out.

While this is going on the tonic properties of the remedy have revitalized the blood and restored vigorous health.

The new remedy which accomplishes these wonderful results is

Anyone can catch fish in California

Bait, a line, hook, rod and a little patience are all that are necessary.

There is good sport within a stone's throw of several of the largest hotels along the coast, but the best fishing is at Santa Catalina Island. Santa Catalina is the home of the tuna—Tiger of the Pacific—which attains a weight of 200 pounds and has been known to tow a boat for hours. The tuna visits Santa Catalina for only a few days in the year, but sea bass, yellow-tail and barracuda are plentiful the year round.

Santa Catalina is only three and one-half hours from Los Angeles and Los Angeles is only three and one-half hours from Chicago via the Rock Island System. Full information on request.

GREAT COMMERCIAL WATERWAY

(Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.)

The Ohio river flows peacefully enough today on its westward course. It passes great cities and pretty villages. Countless prosperous towns line its banks, and it runs its way toward the Mississippi between many hundreds of miles of fertile farms. About its head lie the great coal fields of Pennsylvania and the immense manufacturing district of the Iron City. On its bosom float mighty commercial fleets, and palace steamers still keep alive the traditions of those former days when the river passenger traffic was the greatest thing of its kind in the country. Such is the busy river valley of today.

But less than two centuries ago there was to be seen on the broad face of the Ohio only an occasional birch canoe of an Indian hunter or a small fleet of those graceful craft carrying a war party up or down the lordly stream. The scene then was quiet, save when the war cry broke the silence or the death song floated in plaintive cadence along the echoes. The scene was not idyllic. It was savage, but there was a certain kind of fascination about it, nevertheless. This wilderness solitude was at length broken in upon by two peoples, ever restless and ambitious and always desperately at rivalry with one another.

When the Ohio valley first comes into historic notice, it is called to the attention by the battle cries of the English and the French. Pioneers of both nations came early into the future great valley of the Beautiful River, and there was at once a clash. The two peoples were both Christian, but of widely variant types of civilization, especially when brought to the task of conquering a wilderness and dealing with its savage inhabitants. There was no possibility of amalgamating the two. They could not even be reconciled. So, when both laid claim to the valley of the Ohio they precipitated a conflict which must be fought out to the bitter end. One or the other must go down into utter and bitter defeat.

Such were the conditions existing hereabout when the lilies of France and the cross of St. George were set up as opposing standards in the great forests of the Ohio.

The claims of France and England to this vast and imperial domain are based on foundations which at this distance in time appear shaky enough. France claimed sovereignty, resulting from the discovery in the previous century of the Mississippi river by La Salle. According to the custom of explorers in that day La Salle, on taking possession of the Mississippi assumed rule over all its tributaries even to their extreme sources. This, of course, included the whole Ohio valley, and by a close following up of side streams could be made to include the greater part of the central and eastern portions of the continent. It is supposed that La Salle noticed the mouth of the Ohio, but his actual exploration of any part of its course has always been a question of much doubt.

England's claims were based on a different sort of foundation, but one equally unsubstantial. In 1744 the English authorities made a treaty at Lancaster, Pa., with the Six Nations, by which certain boundaries were fixed. By this treaty the English claimed to come into possession of an indefinite region of country lying toward the setting sun. This country was not occupied or possessed by the Six Nations.

In treating with the English these red statesmen avowed that they had conquered this region, and therefore had the right to sell it or give it away, regardless of the tribes residing in it. This idea pleased our English forefathers, who made a solemn treaty in accordance therewith. But even so to stigmatize a pretext as this for acquiring so great a territory, the Six Nations always afterward claimed that they had been in some way deceived at Lancaster and had not intended to give away the region which the English ever thereafter declared they had obtained by the terms of the treaty.

These several bases of sovereignty, amusing though they may appear now, were the subject of much correspondence between the courts of England and France during the years preceding the French and Indian war. Both nations plainly saw that the question could never be settled by any other method than that of war, so both busily prepared themselves for the inevitable conflict during a considerable period of years, each all the while vehemently protesting its peaceful intentions and constantly deprecating anything which might bring on the actual struggle before it should be ready to strike to the greatest advantage.

This long continued diplomatic correspondence between London and Paris concerning our home region is intensely interesting. It is also amusing. It sounds a good deal like some comic operas we have heard. The tragedy began a while after, when the fighting commenced in the Pennsylvania mountain forests.

Such were the rival claims to the Ohio valley which set two great nations at war to determine which should possess this broad and fair domain. The decision of the sword was very properly in favor of the English, and on their early foundations have been built the great states we now inhabit; but, however much we may rejoice that the outcome was such as it was, we are bound to say in fairness the victory was not necessarily determined by the overwhelming superiority of the English rights in the case. In truth, it was a case of twined and twined, and the final prevalence of the English cause was the best thing that could have happened. But if the contest had been forced to an issue on the actual basis of the rival French and English claims, it would have been still in process of settlement, for it is hard to see what advantage either side really possessed.

Afternoon Tea.

"High tea" is said to be of American origin. The earliest mention of it, according to Dr. Murray, goes no further back than 1856. In fact, tea as an afternoon meal is not much older. It is thought to have originated in 1837 in the house of Mme. de Circourt, a Russian lady, whose salon in Paris was at that time much frequented by the most intellectual society of the day. The fashionable dinner hours were then getting late, and she introduced a 4 o'clock light meal, at which tea was served. Fanny Kemble in "Records of a Girlhood" attributes the introduction of the afternoon meal into this country to the then Duchess of Bedford. Fanny Kemble paid a visit to Belvoir castle in March, 1842, and she relates how a mysterious invitation was received to the duchess's private rooms, where she found a small group of friends partaking of tea in a private and rather shamed way, and dates the 5 o'clock meal from this time. But it was several years later that the practice became general.—London Chronicle.

Rheumatism: Is Not a Skin Disease.

Most people have an idea that rheumatism is contracted like a cold, that the damp, chilly air penetrates the muscles and joints and causes the terrible aches and pains, or that it is something like a skin disease to be rubbed away with liniment or drawn out by plastering; but Rheumatism originates in the blood and is caused by Urea, or Uric Acid, an irritating, corroding poison that settles in muscles, joints and nerves, producing inflammation and soreness and the sharp, cutting pains peculiar to this distressing disease.

Exposure to bad weather or sudden chilling of the body will hasten an attack of Rheumatism after the blood and system are in the right condition for it to develop, but have nothing to do with the real true causes of Rheumatism, which are internal and not external.

Liniments, plaster and rubbing will sometimes reduce the inflammation and swelling and ease the pain for a time, but fail to relieve permanently because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism because it attacks it in the blood, and the Uric Acid poison is neutralized, the sluggish circulation stimulated and quickened, and soon the system is purified and cleansed, the aching muscles and joints are relieved of all irritating matter and a lasting cure of this most painful disease effected.

S. S. S. is a harmless vegetable remedy, unequalled as a blood purifier and an invigorating, pleasant tonic. Book on Rheumatism will be mailed free.

Plays That Please

Fritzi Scheff In "Babette" * Gillette Is Excellent In "The Admirable Crichton" * The Story of Barrie's Four Act Fantasy.

The majority of comic opera stars hope some day to invade the field of grand opera, yet Fritzi Scheff, who has already won honors in grand opera, chooses to rise to greater heights, to describe the situation paradoxically, by stepping down into light opera. As Babette in "Babette," the romantic opera written by Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith and now at the Broadway theater, she does not fail to impress one with the fact that she is eminently fitted to shine brilliantly in light opera.

To state briefly the sum of the whole play, Fritzi Scheff is superior to both the music and the book. This last statement is not intended in the least to disparage the merit of the libretto and Fritzi Scheff as Babette.

Victor Herbert's new compositions, the latter being certainly above the average, but at the same time there are periods during the play when one feels that the prima donna is of a larger caliber than the vehicle with which her manager, C. B. Dillingham, has provided her.

The play opens near Antwerp, the action taking place in the garden of one Van Tynpel (Louis Harrison), a jolly although henpecked clockmaker. Here we learn that the people are suffering under the tyranny of invading Spanish soldiers. A revolt is planned on the spot. Babette is a fascinating public letter writer whose fond young heart beats for her country and for Marcel (Richie Ling), a painter with more sentiment than art in his makeup, not a rare condition among wielders of the defenseless brush in real life.

Mondragon (Eugene Cowles), a soldier of fortune, is nominated by acclamation to lead the uprising. Babette becomes an enthusiastic worker for the cause and one of a band of loyal souls considering themselves past masters in the noble twin sciences of conspiracy and diplomacy.

Allied with Babette, the conspirators determine to get to France to interview the French king. They disguise themselves as strolling players, etc., and thereby hangs a considerable part of the tale. Allied with Babette are Mondragon, Marcel, Van Tynpel and Eva, his loquacious, pertinacious, contumacious spouse, who is secondhand goods in the matrimonial market, having once been the wife of Baltazar (E. J. Connelly), a conspirator against his country.

Fritzi Scheff is the very essence of witchery, and in the different emotions she is called on to illustrate she charms now with her vivacity, winsomeness and coquetry and again with hauteur and condescension. Her singing is up to her former standard and consequently is a delight.

Louis Harrison is splendid as Van Tynpel. In this role he does some of the best work of his long career as a comedian. Eugene Cowles is entirely acceptable as Mondragon. He is a realistic free lance. Richie Ling is a "stagey" painter.

"The Admirable Crichton" is a real delicacy on the theatrical menu. William Gillette has a role in which he shines with a luster that will attract armies of moths, whose coin of the realm is so dear to the box office. The play is now filling the New Lyceum theater, and it is safe to say that the reputation of J. M. Barrie, the author, will grow larger with every performance, although already it has attained proportions that would satisfy most of us mere mortals.

Styled in the programme "a four act fantasy," "The Admirable Crichton" really is fantastic. Original, bright, well staged, tingling with humorous lines, marked by effective situations, the play constantly reveals the unexpected and prods the imagination, thereby materially promoting interest. Through all shines the excellent work of Mr. Gillette. As Crichton—pronounced Cryton—the obsequious butler who on a desert isle was given a chance to demonstrate his qualities of leadership and to develop unrestrained his power of fascinating fair femininity, he is striking in his illustration of the role, one which at first blush would naturally lead one to believe devoid of possibilities for stellar exploitation.

"The Admirable Crichton," which had a long run in London last season, depicts episodes among the high and also among the lowly in "dear old London" and elsewhere—by "elsewhere" I mean an uninhabited island far out of the track of vessels.

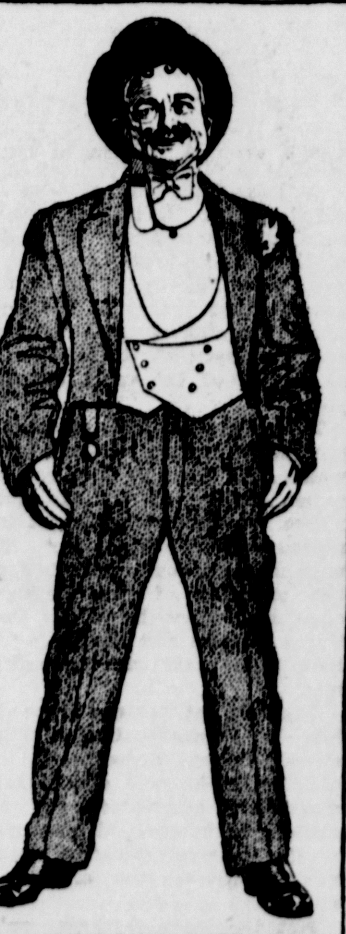

The Earl of Loam (Henry Kemble) becomes imbued with the idea that social distinctions are too finely drawn and invites his servants to enjoy a reception once each month in his drawing room, where all the menials from Crichton, the butler, the grooms, house and kitchen maids, etc., down to the "odds and ends," meet and are entertained by the earl's daughters, a charming trio, and such friends of the family as happen to be on hand. In the first act we see one of the monthly parties. Crichton announces each servant as he or she enters. Each is affected differently by the honor of the occasion. One is scared almost into a fainting attack, another falls a victim to enthusiasm, others show bewilderment, and the scene is very funny indeed.

The earl decides to take an ocean trip on his yacht. Crichton and Twenny (Pattie Browne) constitute the servants for the cruise. The yacht is wrecked, and the party reaches the shores of the aforementioned island in a sadly dilapidated condition. But for the energy and ingenuity of Crichton, who builds a hut, makes a clearing, builds a fire and cooks a meal, etc., the voyageurs would doubtless have perished. In the course of time a contest for leadership ensues between Crichton and the earl, a short, very stout personage. Crichton "wins out." The earl learns to call his former butler "guy," to clean out a dam every day and to perform other little chores cheerfully and thankfully. The Hon. Ernest Woolley, a future literary bud with a penchant for brilliant epigrams, is made to feel the might of Crichton's wrath on several occasions.

In act 3 we are treated to the sight of Crichton seated at a table, with Lady Mary Lasenby (Sibyl Carlisle), the earl's haughty daughter of three years before, when in London, serving food to the master of the island—he who was once the subservient, dutiful butler. Lady Mary also fans his royal highness and, to fill his cup to overflowing, falls desperately in love with him. He reciprocates, being almost consumed by a volcano of passion that well nigh burns his material body into a cinder, and says to Lady Mary, "I was a king in Babylon, and you were a Christian slave." Not bad for a butler, eh?

However, the dream of happiness of the butler and the lady is cut short by the guns of a British man-of-war, the officers of which come ashore and take all concerned back to England. Crichton again becomes the indispensable chief of the underworld in the earl's household, and Lady Mary resumes her position of mistress of the house, being the eldest daughter, and marries the Lord Brookhurst, a sweet young thing who tells mamma all his troubles, even those of the heart.

Sam Bernard has made one of the hits of his career as Hoggendheimer in

SAM BERNARD IN "THE GIRL FROM KAY'S."

"The Girl From Kay's" at the Herald Square theater. To use an everyday expression, Bernard and Hattie Williams in the leading roles are "making things hum." Bernard's grins and the disconnected, eccentric manipulation of his legs and feet contribute largely to the humor of his role. Bernard is known as one of the most original of comedians, seldom failing to inject some new line or feature into his role on each succeeding night.

lines, marked by effective situations, the play constantly reveals the unexpected and prods the imagination, thereby materially promoting interest. Through all shines the excellent work of Mr. Gillette. As Crichton—pronounced Croyton—the obsequious butler who on a desert isle was given a chance to demonstrate his qualities of leadership and to develop unrestrained his power of fascinating fair femininity, he is striking in his illustration of the role, one which at first blush would naturally lead one to believe devoid of possibilities for stellar exploitation.

"The Admirable Crichton," which had a long run in London last season, depicts episodes among the high and also among the lowly in "dear old London" and elsewhere—by "elsewhere" I mean an uninhabited island far out of the track of vessels.

The Earl of Loam (Henry Kemble) becomes imbued with the idea that social distinctions are too finely drawn and invites his servants to enjoy a reception once each month in his drawing room, where all the menials from Crichton, the butler, the grooms, house and kitchen maids, etc., down to the "odds and ends," meet and are entertained by the earl's daughters, a charming trio, and such friends of the family as happen to be on hand. In the first act we see one of the monthly parties. Crichton announces each servant as he or she enters. Each is affected differently by the honor of the occasion. One is scared almost into a fainting attack, another falls a victim to enthusiasm, others show bewilderment, and the scene is very funny indeed.

The earl decides to take an ocean trip on his yacht. Crichton and Twynny (Pattie Browne) constitute the servants for the cruise. The yacht is wrecked, and the party reaches the shores of the aforementioned island in a sadly dilapidated condition. But for the energy and ingenuity of Crichton, who builds a hut, makes a clearing, builds a fire and cooks a meal, etc., the voyageurs would doubtless have perished. In the course of time a contest for leadership ensues between Crichton and the earl, a short, very stout personage. Crichton "wins out." The earl learns to call his former butler "guy," to clean out a dam every day and to perform other little chores cheerfully and thankfully. The Hon. Ernest Woolley, a future literary bud with a penchant for brilliant epigrams, is made to feel the might of Crichton's wrath on several occasions.

In act 3 we are treated to the sight of Crichton seated at a table, with Lady Mary Lasenby (Sibyl Carlisle), the earl's haughty daughter of three years before, when in London, serving food to the master of the island—he who was once the subservient, dutiful butler. Lady Mary also fans his royal highness and, to fill his cup to overflowing, falls desperately in love with him. He reciprocates, being almost consumed by a volcano of passion that well nigh burns his material body into a cinder, and says to Lady Mary, "I was a king in Babylon, and you were a Christian slave." Not bad for a butler, eh?

However, the dream of happiness of the butler and the lady is cut short by the guns of a British man-of-war, the officers of which come ashore and take all concerned back to England. Crichton again becomes the indispensable chief of the underworld in the earl's household, and Lady Mary resumes her position of mistress of the house, being the eldest daughter, and marries the Lord Brocklehurst, a sweet young thing who tells mamma all his troubles, even those of the heart.

Sam Bernard has made one of the hits of his career as Hoggshelmer in

Sam Bernard in "The Girl From Kay's."

"The Girl From Kay's" at the Herald Square theater. To use an everyday expression, Bernard and Hattie Williams in the leading roles are "making things hum." Bernard's grins and the disconnected, eccentric manipulation of his legs and feet contribute largely to the humor of his role. Bernard is known as one of the most original of comedians, seldom failing to inject some new line or feature into his role on each succeeding night.

School Girls

Mothers of young girls at this period of life, or the girl herself, are earnestly invited to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice; all such letters are strictly confidential; she has guided in a motherly way thousands of young women; and her advice is freely and cheerfully given.

School days are danger days for American girls. Often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality. Sometimes it is never recovered. Perhaps they are not over-careful about keeping their feet dry; through carelessness in this respect the monthly sickness is usually rendered very severe. Then begin ailments which should be removed at once, or they will produce constant suffering. Headache, faintness, slight vertigo, pains in the back and loins, irregularity, loss of sleep and appetite, a tendency to avoid the society of others, are symptoms all indicating that the organs that make her a woman need immediate attention.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

has helped many a young girl over this critical period. With it they have gone through their trials with courage and safety. With its proper use the young girl is safe from the peculiar dangers of school years and prepared for healthy womanhood.

A Young Chicago Girl "Studied Too Hard."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for the help and benefit I have received through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. When I was about 17 years old I suddenly seemed to lose my usual good health and vitality. Father said I studied too hard, but the doctor thought different and prescribed tonics, which I took by the quart without relief. Reading one day in the paper of Mrs. Pinkham's great cures, and finding the symptoms described answered mine, I decided I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did not say a word to the doctor; I bought it myself, and took it according to directions regularly for two months, and I found that I gradually improved, and that all pains left me, and I was my old self once more."—LILLIE E. SINCLAIR, 17 E. 23d St., Chicago, Ill.

"Miss Pratt Unable to Attend School."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months. I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—MISS ALMA PRATT, Holly, Mich.

Thousands of such testimonials prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one sure remedy to be relied upon at this important period in a young girl's life. Look for the bottle with Lydia E. Pinkham's face on it, and accept no other.

THE IMPOVERISHMENT OF LABOR

By Ex-Speaker GALUSHA A. GROW

Of all the baneful influences which lead to national decay the most pernicious is a policy that degrades or impoverishes labor.

THE REAL STRENGTH OF A NATION CONSISTS NOT ALONE IN FLEETS AND ARMIES, BUT IN THE MANLY SPIRIT OF AN INDEPENDENT YEOMANRY AND IN THE INTELLIGENCE, COMFORT AND HAPPINESS OF ITS LABORING PEOPLE.

Of all industrial questions, the one that most directly affects the general welfare is THE RELATION OF AMERICAN LABOR TO CAPITAL. In the prosecution of business of any magnitude three things are necessary—capital, supervision and labor. For success, wise supervision is quite as important as either. Without capital and wise supervision it would be impossible for labor alone to accomplish any great result. Yet labor, whether of brain or muscle, is entitled to receive out of the accumulations of wealth IN PROPORTION TO WHAT IT CONTRIBUTES TOWARD THE ACCUMULATION. While this theory is just, the difficulty in reducing it to practice is to devise a satisfactory method by which it could be done.

HOW TO SUCCEED

By J. G. SHEDD, Chicago Millionaire

THE man who is not polite is ninety-nine times out of a hundred a failure.

HIGH MORAL CHARACTER IS THE BEST COMMODITY A BUSINESS MAN CAN KEEP IN STOCK.

You can't be a good salesman and be a liar.

You can't aim too high—and be sure to pull the trigger before you get wobbly.

Breathe pure air. Associate with good companions. DRINK PLENTY OF PURE WATER AND NOTHING THAT WILL INTOXICATE. Take plenty of wholesome exercise. By a little training you will have an outfit which will take you far on the road to success in business.

Learn how to save. Give the money you are spending for tobacco and drinks to your wife to put in the savings bank. Don't ever invest your savings for the sake of the income. It's very dangerous.

THE BIG HEAD IS THE WORST DISEASE THAT EVER ATTACKED A YOUNG MAN.

The fellow who only thinks ordinarily and lives ordinarily and doesn't much care will never go anywhere.

SCIENCE A HELP TO RELIGION

By LORD KELVIN

CAN any one be so absurd as to believe that a number of atoms falling together of their own accord could make a crystal, sprig of moss, the microbe or a living animal? No body could think that anything like that even in millions and millions of years could, unaided, give us a beautiful world like ours. LET NOBODY BE AFRAID OF TRUE FREEDOM OF THOUGHT. Let us be free in thought and criticism, but with freedom we are bound to come to the conclusion that SCIENCE IS NOT ANTAGONISTIC, BUT IS A HELP, TO RELIGION.

THE LABOR-CAPITAL MILLENNIUM

By ANDREW CARNEGIE

WE may look forward with hope to the day when it shall be the rule that THE WORKMAN IS PARTNER WITH CAPITAL, the man of affairs giving his business experience, the workman giving his mechanical skill to the company, both owners in the shares, and so far equally interested in the success of their joint efforts, EACH INDISPENSABLE TO THE OTHER, without whose co-operation success were impossible.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

* Fair Play *

Little Bill had got the craze for using a slung shot. He had played hooky from school one day to cut the "crotch." He had crept softly into his father's library, opened the table drawer and extracted a rubber band to furnish the shooting force. He had cut the palm out of his sister's kid glove to make the "stone holder," and now he had left the schoolhouse behind him once more and was off in the green meadow after some frogs to shoot.

"Jug-a-run, jug-a-run!" croaked the frogs along the bank. "Knee-deep, knee-deep!" piped the "peepers." Bill lay upon the bank and waited.

"Hope they's a big bummer here," wished Bill to himself. "I've got a dinky round stone here to soak him with."

Presently a green head and two big eyes appeared above the green scum on the brook. Bill turned to get his "dinky stone" to put it in the slung shot; then he turned.

But what a sight met his eyes! These eyes nearly popped out of his head. He dropped the stone and tried to scream, but couldn't. There sat the frog, as large as a cow, looking severely at Bill with his big eyes. Presently it said:

"Why don't you soak him?" Bill's tongue seemed tied.

"Better shoot before he jumps," continued the frog, with a horrible grin. "His legs will make a fine supper."

Bill tried to stammer out something about "Beg p-p-pardon; I didn't e-c-c-come out f-for you."

"No; you came for the little fellows who couldn't hit back," said the frog. "Why don't you take some one of your own size? Why don't you shoot at me now? I'm all ready."

"I couldn't kill you; you're too big," said Bill, getting a little used to things. "That's just it," answered the frog. "It's because we're little things. Do you think, my brave boy, that if you were always little and I was always big you would shoot me? I guess not. Why don't you take a fellow of your size? But just give me that shooter. I guess you'll have no use for it further."

With a great gulp he swallowed the shooter, crotch and all, and dived into the brook kerchunk! At least this is the tale Bill told the teacher next day.

THE FIRST COURT HELD IN OHIO

Great Gathering at Mouth of Muskingum on Sept. 2, 1793.

(Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.)

On Sept. 2, 1793, an imposing scene was witnessed on the banks of the Ohio river at the mouth of the Muskingum, where the first civil court ever held north of the Ohio was convened. The Marietta settlement in the new northwest territory had just been made that same summer, and the judicial tribunal provided for in the ordinance was established in full force on the day named. The occasion was most significant. The principal actors in it were men of note in their day. Some of them were leading characters during the stormy days of the Revolution. Others were men high in civil or professional life some of whom were in later years of even greater fame than at the time these incidents occurred.

When the Northwest Territory was erected the thought prominently before the minds of the founders was one of law and the dignity of government. This new land was to be a really free territory, in which justice should be administered in the most approved fashion. So courts were ordained and the machinery of justice was early set in motion. The date mentioned in the opening of this sketch was one of deep significance to the public life of the American people, for on it began the life of the law on which the people of a large section of the nation have ever since depended for so much that makes up a livable life.

On the great day of the first court there was a gathering at the mouth of the tributary river which was notable for that day. In connection with the establishment of the new tribunal, a procession was formed down at the Point, as it was called, which was constituted as follows: The high sheriff came first, with a drawn sword; then followed in orderly array the citizens of the new community; next marched in full uniform, the officers of the garrison at Fort Harmar; the members of the bar, then fewer in number than now, next followed; they were followed by the judges of the supreme court; the governor and clergy came next, and last were the newly appointed judges of the court of common pleas.

This dignified and representative procession moved through a path which had been cut through the woods leading up to the fortress, where were rooms set apart for the sacred uses of justice. Here the column solemnly counter-marched, and in the presence of the distinguished company present the judges, Generals Rufus Putnam and Benjamin Tupper, took their seats with becoming dignity.

The first act was the prayer by the Rev. Dr. Manassah Cutler. Then the sheriff, Colonel Sproot, with the use of the time-honored old formula, declared the court open for the dispensing of justice. All the witnesses of the impressive scene were duly moved with a sense of what it all meant.

Not the least observant onlookers were several large bodies of Indians belonging to the western tribes, who had come, some of them, long distances to see the novel spectacle of the enthronement of justice among the white men.

This first court was a small one, with but little business, but it was an important one in every sense of the word.

STRICKEN FIELD VISITED.

Remains of Slaughtered Soldiers Interred by Wayne's Brave Followers.

(Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.)

In 1791 the army of General St. Clair was defeated and almost annihilated by the Indians in southwestern Ohio. So far as is shown no white man visited this field of massacre till over two years after the battle. Individual parties may have ventured to steal up and gaze on the dreadful scene, but no body of white men reached the field till in December, 1793, General Anthony Wayne, who was then mustering his troops for his successful attack on the various tribes, sent a party of his soldiers to visit the field of defeat. This detachment was ordered to erect a small fort there, which was done, and the name of Fort Recovery was given to it. The present town of Recovery, O., perpetuates the name and incident now given.

The scene which met the gaze of Wayne's men as they came to the battlefield was one to cause the saddest of reflections. Everywhere were evidences of horrible carnage. The men solemnly set about the sad task of giving burial to the bones of the unfortunates who had fallen two years before. Within a space of 350 yards of the new Fort Recovery they gathered up a sickening mass of bones, among which were 550 skulls. These they buried in as decently Christian a fashion as they could. Having pretty well cleaned up the ground where the main attack was made, they set out along the road down which, through the dense forests, St. Clair's surviving men had fled. For a distance of five miles they found this pathway plentifully strewn with skeletons, guns and various accoutrements such as would be cast away by a panic-stricken army. They gathered these bones also and gave them burial, and picked up such articles as might still be of some worth.

Search was made for the two brass cannon which St. Clair had with him, one a three-pounder and the other a six-pounder. They were found lying in a small creek near the place of the defeat.

Wayne's men occupied the place for a period, continuing the work which they had begun, and the record of it is of great interest.

Taking Pleasure Swiftly.

Take time to be merry, to "have a good time," and you will double your possibilities of health, wealth and happiness. Anglo-Saxons are made fun of because they take even their pleasures sadly. Their American cousins, with characteristic energy, make a business of it. Ian MacLaren's story of the American who was "doing" the United Kingdom is a good illustration of Jonathan's method of pleasuring.

A visitor's card was brought to Dr. Watson (Ian MacLaren) in his study, but before he had time to read it his visitor stood before him and announced himself. "My name is Elijah K. Higgins," he said breathlessly, "and I am a busy man. You are also busy and have no time to fool away. Four days are all I can give to the United Kingdom, and I wish to shake hands with you. Goodbye! I am off to Drum-techtly!"—Success.

THE IMPOVERISHMENT OF LABOR

By Ex-Speaker GALUSHA A. GROW

Of all the baneful influences which lead to national decay the most pernicious is a policy that degrades or impoverishes labor.

THE REAL STRENGTH OF A NATION CONSISTS NOT ALONE IN FLEETS AND ARMIES, BUT IN THE MANLY SPIRIT OF AN INDEPENDENT YEOMANRY AND IN THE INTELLIGENCE, COMFORT AND HAPPINESS OF ITS LABORING PEOPLE.

Of all industrial questions, the one that most directly affects the general welfare is THE RELATION OF AMERICAN LABOR TO CAPITAL. In the prosecution of business of any magnitude three things are necessary—capital, supervision and labor. For success, wise supervision is quite as important as either. Without capital and wise supervision it would be impossible for labor alone to accomplish any great result. Yet labor, whether of brain or muscle, is entitled to receive out of the accumulations of wealth IN PROPORTION TO WHAT IT CONTRIBUTES TOWARD THE ACCUMULATION. While this theory is just, the difficulty in reducing it to practice is to devise a satisfactory method by which it could be done.

HOW TO SUCCEED

By J. G. SHEDD, Chicago Millionaire

THE man who is not polite is ninety-nine times out of a hundred a failure.

HIGH MORAL CHARACTER IS THE BEST COMMODITY A BUSINESS MAN CAN KEEP IN STOCK.

You can't be a good salesman and be a liar.

You can't aim too high—and be sure to pull the trigger before you get wobbly.

Breathe pure air. Associate with good companions. DRINK PLENTY OF PURE WATER AND NOTHING THAT WILL INTOXICATE. Take plenty of wholesome exercise. By a little training you will have an outfit which will take you far on the road to success in business.

Learn how to save. Give the money you are spending for tobacco and drinks to your wife to put in the savings bank. Don't ever invest your savings for the sake of the income. It's very dangerous.

THE BIG HEAD IS THE WORST DISEASE THAT EVER ATTACKED A YOUNG MAN.

The fellow who only thinks ordinarily and lives ordinarily and doesn't much care will never go anywhere.

DON'T LOSE YOUR TEMPER. LET THE OTHER FELLOW LOSE HIS.

SCIENCE A HELP TO RELIGION

By LORD KELVIN

CAN any one be so absurd as to believe that a number of atoms falling together of their own accord could make a crystal, sprig of moss, the microbe or a living animal? Nobody could think that anything like that even in millions and millions of years could, unaided, give us a beautiful world like ours. LET NOBODY BE AFRAID OF TRUE FREEDOM OF THOUGHT. Let us be free in thought and criticism, but with freedom we are bound to come to the conclusion that SCIENCE IS NOT ANTAGONISTIC, BUT IS A HELP, TO RELIGION.

THE LABOR-CAPITAL MILLENNIUM

By ANDREW CARNEGIE

WE may look forward with hope to the day when it shall be the rule that THE WORKMAN IS PARTNER WITH CAPITAL, the man of affairs giving his business experience, the workman giving his mechanical skill to the company, both owners in the shares, and so far equally interested in the success of their joint efforts, EACH INDISPENSABLE TO THE OTHER, without whose co-operation success were impossible.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Fair Play

Little Bill had got the craze for using a slung shot. He had played hooky from school one day to cut the "croch." He had crept softly into his father's library, opened the table drawer and extracted a rubber band to furnish the shooting force. He had cut the palm out of his sister's kid glove to make the "stone holder," and now he had left the schoolhouse behind him once more and was off in the green meadow after some frogs to shoot.

"Jug-a-rum, jug-a-rum!" croaked the frogs along the bank. "Knee-deep, knee-deep!" piped the "peepers." Bill lay upon the bank and waited.

"WHY DON'T YOU SHOOT?" "Hope they's a big bummer here," wished Bill to himself. "I've got a dinky round stone here to soak him with."

Presently a green head and two big eyes appeared above the green scum on the brook. Bill turned to get his "dinky stone" to put it in the slung shot; then he turned.

But what a sight met his eyes! These eyes nearly popped out of his head. He dropped the stone and tried to scream, but couldn't. There sat the frog, as large as a cow, looking severely at Bill with his big eyes. Presently it said:

"Why don't you soak him?" Bill's tongue seemed tied. "Better shoot before he jumps," continued the frog, with a horrible grin. "His legs will make a fine supper."

Bill tried to stammer out something about "B-g-p-pardon; I didn't e-c-come out f-for you."

"No; you came for the little fellows who couldn't hit back," said the frog. "Why don't you take some one of your own size? Why don't you shoot at me now? I'm all ready."

"I couldn't kill you; you're too big," said Bill, getting a little used to things. "That's just it," answered the frog. "It's because we're little things. Do you think, my brave boy, that if you were always little and I was always big you would shoot me? I guess not. Why don't you take a fellow of your size? But just give me that shooter. I guess you'll have no use for it further."

With a great gulp he swallowed the shooter, croak and all, and dived into the brook kerehunk! At least this is the tale Bill told the teacher next day. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE FIRST COURT HELD IN OHIO

Great Gathering at Mouth of Muskingum on Sept. 2, 1782.

On Sept. 2, 1782, an imposing scene was witnessed on the banks of the Ohio river at the mouth of the Muskingum, where the first civil court ever held north of the Ohio was convened. The Marietta settlement in the new Northwest territory had just been made that same summer, and the judicial tribunal provided for in the ordinance was established in full form on the day named. The occasion was most significant. The principal actors in it were men of note in their day. Some of them were leading characters during the stormy days of the Revolution. Others were men high in civil or professional life, some of whom were in later years of even greater fame than at the time these incidents occurred.

When the Northwest Territory was erected the thought prominently before the minds of the founders was one of law and the dignity of government. This new land was to be a really free territory, in which justice should be administered in the most approved fashion. So courts were ordained and the machinery of justice was early set in motion. The date mentioned in the opening of this sketch was one of deep significance in the public life of the American people, for on it began the life of the law on which the people of a large section of the nation have ever since depended for so much that makes up a livable life.

On the great day of the first court there was a gathering at the mouth of the tributary river which was notable for that day. In connection with the establishment of the new tribunal a procession was formed down at the Point, as it was called, which was constituted as follows: The high sheriff came first, with a drawn sword; then followed in orderly array the citizens of the new community; next marched in full uniform, the officers of the militia; then the members of the bar, then fewer in number than now, next followed; they were followed by the judges of the supreme court; the governor and clergy came next, and last were the newly appointed judges of the court of common pleas.

This dignified and representative procession moved through a path which had been cut through the woods leading up to the fortress, where were rooms set apart for the sacred uses of justice. Here the column solemnly counter-marched, and in the presence of the distinguished company present the judges, Generals Rufus Putnam and Benjamin Tupper, took their seats with becoming dignity.

The first act was the prayer by the Rev. Dr. Manassah Cutler. Then the sheriff, Colonel Sproot, with the use of the time-honored old formula, declared the court open for the dispensing of justice. All the witnesses of the impressive scene were duly moved with a sense of what it all meant.

Not the least observant onlookers were several large bodies of Indians belonging to the western tribes, who had come, some of them, long distances to see the novel spectacle of the enthronement of justice among the white men.

This first court was a small one, with but little business, but it was an important one in every sense of the word. C. L. SMITH.

STRICKEN FIELD VISITED. Remains of Slaughtered Soldiers Interred by Wayne's Brave Followers. [Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.] In 1791 the army of General St. Clair was defeated and almost annihilated by the Indians in southwestern Ohio. So far as is shown no white man visited this field of massacre till over two years after the battle. Individual parties may have ventured to steal up and gaze on the dreadful scene, but no body of white men reached the field till in December, 1793, General Anthony Wayne, who was then mustering his troops for his successful attack on the various tribes, sent a party of his soldiers to visit the field of defeat. This detachment was ordered to erect a small fort there, which was done, and the name of Fort Recovery was given to it. The present town of Recovery, O., perpetuates the name and incident now given.

The scene which met the gaze of Wayne's men as they came to the battlefield was one to cause the saddest of reflections. Everywhere were evidences of horrible carnage. The men solemnly set about the sad task of giving burial to the bones of the unfortunates who had fallen two years before. Within a space of 350 yards of the new Fort Recovery they gathered up a sickening mass of bones, among which were 550 skulls. These they buried in as decently Christian a fashion as they could. Having pretty well cleaned up the ground where the main attack was made, they set out along the road down which, through the dense forests, St. Clair's surviving men had fled. For a distance of five miles they found this pathway plentifully strewn with skeletons, guns and various accoutrements such as would be cast away by a panic-stricken army. They gathered these bones also and gave them burial, and picked up such articles as might still be of some worth.

Search was made for the two brass cannon which St. Clair had with him, one a three-pounder and the other a six-pounder. They were found lying in a small creek near the place of the defeat. Wayne's men occupied the place for a period, continuing the work which they had begun, and the record of it is of great interest. C. L. SMITH.

Taking Pleasure Swiftly. Take time to be merry, to "have a good time," and you will double your possibilities of health, wealth and happiness. Anglo-Saxons are made fun of because they take even their pleasures sadly. Their American cousins, with characteristic energy, make a business of it. Ian MacLaren's story of the American who was "doing" the United Kingdom is a good illustration of Jonathan's method of pleasuring. A visitor's card was brought to Dr. Watson (Ian MacLaren) in his study, but before he had time to read it his visitor stood before him and announced himself. "My name is Elijah K. Higgins," he said breathlessly, "and I am a busy man. You are also busy and have no time to fool away. Four days are all I can give to the United Kingdom, and I wish to shake hands with you. Goodbye! I am off to Drumtochty!"—Success.

On Dunbar Rests Odium of Shameless Act—Should Have Assumed Full Authority.

WINTER QUARTERS IN SUMMER

[Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.]

The whole story of the campaign against Fort Duquesne in 1755 is one of accumulated shame. After the massacre of the army at what the French called the battle of the Monongahela the few wounded and frightened survivors made their way painfully back along the road they had so recently cut, carrying with them their stricken and dying commander. On the arrival of this sorry party at the camp of Colonel Dunbar, who lay with the reserve force near where is now the site of Uniontown, Pa., a scene of confusion ensued which is scarcely to be paralleled in the military history of this country.

The first intimation that Dunbar and the soldiers in his camp received of the awful slaughter of the main army was on the day of the battle, when about noon some wagons and drivers of pack-horses came in terror into camp and with blanched faces cried out that all the army was slain and they alone were left to tell the tale. In a little while others came panting in. Soon a party was seen approaching carrying a wounded officer on a sheet. Immediately the troops crowded around the pale and panic-stricken fugitives to hear the startling tale.

As the truth flashed on them that the gallant army which had gone on ahead had been literally swallowed up in the great forest the feeling of fear communicated itself to them, and many of them deserted, fleeing incontinently, even though the sentinels used every endeavor to compel them to remain within the lines. All that afternoon and night the panic increased, as the stream of fugitives kept stringing in. The next day came the group of officers and Virginians, bringing the dying General Braddock.

Dunbar had with him the main part of the expedition's stores. Wagons, ammunition, artillery, provisions, equipment, all were with him. On the arrival of this last bit of the wreck of the army orders were issued to destroy all these valuable stores, give up the expedition and retreat for a safe place as fast as could be done. Scarcely could the men be kept long enough to obey these orders, so terribly were they frightened. They kept listening every minute to hear the howl of the whirlwind of death coming through the forest. A hundred Indians could have driven the entire lot in terror before them.

The knot of Virginians who, with Washington, stood by the dying commander, were the only ones who had not completely lost their nerve. In obedience to the orders over a hundred wagons, with their contents, were burned. A vast quantity of provisions were broken open and thrown into the runs or scattered to rot in the underbrush. Cannon were buried and shells were blown up or cast into the waters. A great lot of powder was soaked and spoiled. Everything which could be destroyed was made away with.

Then the army—that part of it which had not already slipped away piecemeal—set out on the retreat. The rout of the once confident body of troops was complete. Soon Braddock died, and after quickly burying his body the company pushed on eastward, nor did they stop—that is, the regulars—till they were safely housed in Philadelphia in winter quarters in the middle of summer.

There has always been a dispute among historians as to whether the dying Braddock or Dunbar gave the orders for the fearful destruction of supplies, but, whether it was the one or the other, on Dunbar rests the odium of the act, for Braddock was a condition when brought to Dunbar's camp that he would have been fully justified in assuming full command and disregarding everything his superiors might say. Dunbar has been called the Tardy, but there was certainly nothing slow about the way he left the frontier uncovered and fled to the safe precincts of Philadelphia.

Of course he had a great deal to say about the many sights he saw and the many things he did, and he entertained Mr. Caterpillar for fully seven minutes in this manner.

"Well," said Mr. Caterpillar, "you certainly did have a good time, judging from what you say. I would have liked to have been along with you. But did you hear the news?"

"No," replied Mr. Bug. "There's a man at your house to collect the rent."

"Oh, my!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a cent!"
"And another to collect the grocer's bill!"

"Wow!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a penny!"
"And another to collect the doctor's bill!"

"Whew!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a copper!"

"Then I guess they'll send you to jail," declared Mr. Caterpillar. "But you will have one consolation—you had a good time while you were away spending your money. Goodbye!"

"Hold on!" cried Mr. Bug. "Don't leave me!"

"Oh, yes, I must," said Mr. Caterpillar. "I've got to take the money I saved by staying at home this year and pay my doctor and grocer and landlord."—Atlanta Constitution.

Lovers of Beauty.
The Japanese have a most charming custom which the Americans would do well in following. In the houses of the well-to-do there is always one room which is called "the chamber of the inspiring view," and from the windows of this room may be seen some beauty of nature, sometimes a glimpse of a winding river or pretty hills, and frequently it is no more than a blossoming cherry tree or an interrupted stretch of white snow, but in any case showing the simple love of the naturally beautiful. While we Americans give theater and dinner parties, the Japanese get up parties to visit the maple trees while they are resplendent in the autumn colors or to go mushroom hunting, and in the winter they go out into the country to view the fresh untrodden snow.—Detroit Tribune.

One of Falb's Predictions.
The Journal des Debats tells a story of Professor Rudolf Falb. In 1874 he predicted an eruption of Etna on Aug. 27. He offered a Vienna editor to write an account of it if the editor would send him to Sicily. Falb was commissioned. When he reached Etna there was not the slightest sign of disturbance. As the 27th approached Falb was tortured with anxiety and spent sleepless nights watching the volcano. Nothing happened on the 27th and 28th. The following morning the servant rushed into the professor's room shouting, "An eruption, a terrible eruption!" Falb saw the spectacle and sent off his dispatch.

LONDON THE AUTHOR

RAPID RISE OF A YOUNG GENIUS OF CALIFORNIA.

His New Book, "The Call of the Wild," Which Has Been Very Well Received—How He Became a Literary Man.

Since Kipling wrote his "Jungle Book" there have appeared various writers of "animal stories"—Thompson-Seton, William J. Long, Sewell Ford and others. Among the latest and most successful of these, though writing along different lines from any of his predecessors, is Jack London, a young Californian, whose sketches in the magazines first began to attract attention about three years ago. His latest story is "The Call of the Wild," just issued by Macmillan, of which the hero, Buck, is a dog, a noble animal of mixed St. Bernard and shepherd breed, and the story recounts the adventures that befell this gallant fellow in the wilds of Alaska.

Although Jack London is not yet twenty-seven years of age, he has crowded into the short space of his life experiences enough for half a century. He is the son of parents who wandered from eastern homes, meeting in California, where they were married and bequeathed to their son the pioneer and adventurous spirit which had actuated them. He was born in San Francisco on Jan. 12, 1876. The boy had a hard life, supporting himself by manual labor even before he had reached the age of nine years. He was not an ordinary boy, however, and what might have coarsened one of less strength of character was to him a valuable experience. Speaking of his early life, Mr. London recently said in an interview published in the Reader:

"Almost the first things I realized were responsibilities. I was wage earner as ranch hand long before I was nine, when my mother moved to Oakland, where I worked as newsboy. After that I went with the oyster pirates and salmon fishermen along the Sacramento river. Some of these men were Greeks. The life was eventful, but strange and hard, the men, some of them, cutthroats. The San Francisco water front holds many phases of life and romance and danger.

"After a year or two I shipped as common sailor and went to Japan.

JACK LONDON.

When I came back I entered a cotton mill, where I worked from 5 in the morning until 11 at night. I had been to school some and had written compositions which had been praised—the usual thing, you know.

In 1894, when eighteen years of age, Mr. London tramped 10,000 miles through the United States and Canada, adopting for a time the vagrant life for purposes of sociological and economic study. Speaking of his experience as a tramp and its effect upon his life, Mr. London says:

"Before I took that tramp across the United States I loved hard work, loved to do it, wanted to throw myself into it, fairly gloried in manual labor. I accomplished more than I was paid for or expected to do from sheer love of it. In Buffalo I was arrested and thrown into jail as a tramp; my hair was clipped, and I was subjected to the regular tramp routine. There I saw that the workman was simply in the social pit, was literally holding on the sides with his hands, and I resolved then and there never to work again manually, for in that way man gets beneath the capitalist. From that day I was a socialist."

Returning to the home of his boyhood, Mr. London entered the University of California in 1896, but remained only a year, being obliged to give up his collegiate studies because of a lack of funds. About this time the Klondike was beginning to attract the mining prospector and gold seeker, and Mr. London's adventurous spirit led him thither. While unsuccessful in his search for gold, he accumulated there a fund of experience and information which has served as a basis for very much that he has written.

Upon his return from the Klondike Mr. London wrote "The Man on the Trail," which the Overland Magazine published in 1899. This first success was followed by eight other short stories, all of which, with one exception, were published in the Overland and were subsequently collected in book form under the title of "The Son of the Wolf," which brought him recognition from the literary world. Other stories by Mr. London are "The League of the Old Men," "The White Silence," "The God of His Fathers," "Daughter of the North," "The Children of the Frost," "Kempton-Wace Letters" and "The Call of the Wild," the last being considered his best work. It is at least attracting very general and favorable attention.

THE WAYSIDE TAVERN.

Hostelries in Colonial Days Somewhat Different from Those of Today.
[Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.]
A feature of the early life of this region of country which was of great importance was the old-fashioned wayside tavern. It was not often a very pretentious place, but it made such effort as was in its power to supply the needs of man and beast as regarded food, drink and a place to lodge. These old hostelries were very much alike, and a description of one of them gives a very clear idea of what all were like.

The buildings were generally plain and simple of construction. In the earlier years they were nearly all built of logs in the rough. There followed a period of improvement, in which hewn timbers were used. This marked a decided improvement in the growth of the frontier. Finally, when sawed timber was obtainable and weatherboarding was cheap enough to make its general use possible, the millenium was supposed to have arrived. The accommodations afforded by

Barnstable Fair.

An annual fair at Barnstable, England, has been held for hundreds of years. It was originally held in July, but the time was altered to September by a charter granted by Queen Mary. Barnstable fair is inaugurated with a ceremony in the town hall, where a special meeting of the town council is held and spiced ale and toast (prepared in the council chamber by the benches and mace bearers) are dispensed to all who crowd the building. Appropriate toasts are proposed and speeches made by the local member of parliament and others, after which the mayor proceeds in procession to three points of the town, at each of which is read his proclamation opening the fair and enjoining all concerned to keep the peace during its continuance. Not until this ceremony has been performed can the business and fun of the fair proceed. On the inauguration of the fair a huge stuffed white glove, adorned with flowers, is thrust on a pole from one of the upper windows of the town hall and remains in evidence during the continuance of the festival as the symbol of open handed welcome.

Flee in Panic After Receiving News of Braddock's Defeat.

VALUABLE STORES DESTROYED

On Dunbar Rests Oidium of Shameless Act—Should Have Assumed Full Authority.

WINTER QUARTERS IN SUMMER

[Copyright 1903 by American Press Association.]

The whole story of the campaign against Fort Duquesne in 1755 is one of accumulated shame. After the massacre of the army at what the French called the battle of the Monongahela the few wounded and frightened survivors made their way painfully back along the road they had so recently cut, carrying with them their stricken and dying commander. On the arrival of this sorry party at the camp of Colonel Dunbar, who lay with the reserve force near where is now the site of Uniontown, Pa., a scene of panic ensued which is scarcely to be paralleled in the military history of this country.

The first intimation that Dunbar and the soldiers in his camp received of the awful slaughter of the main army was on the day of the battle, when about noon some wagoners and drivers of pack-horses came in terror into camp and with blanched faces cried out that all the army was slain and they alone were left to tell the tale. In a little while others came panting in. Soon a party was seen approaching carrying a wounded officer on a sheet. Immediately the troops crowded around the pale and panic-stricken fugitives to hear the startling tale.

As the truth flashed on them that the gallant army which had gone on ahead had been literally swallowed up in the great forest the feeling of fear communicated itself to them, and many of them deserted, fleeing ineffectually, even though the sentinels used every endeavor to compel them to remain within the lines. All that afternoon and night the panic increased, as the stream of fugitives kept stringing in. The next day came the group of officers and Virginians, bringing the dying General Braddock. Dunbar had with him the main part of the expedition's stores. Wagons, ammunition, artillery, provisions, equipment, all were with him. On the arrival of this last bit of the wreck of the army orders were issued to destroy all these valuable stores, give up the expedition and retreat for a safe place as fast as could be done. Scarcely could the men be kept long enough to obey these orders, so terribly were they frightened. They kept listening every minute to hear the howl of the whirlwind of death coming through the forest. A hundred Indians could have driven the entire lot in terror before them.

The knot of Virginians who, with Washington, stood by the dying commander, were the only ones who had not completely lost their nerve.

In obedience to the orders over a hundred wagons, with their contents, were burned. A vast quantity of provisions were broken open and thrown into the runs or scattered to rot in the underbrush. Cannon were buried and shells were blown up or cast into the waters. A great lot of powder was soaked and spoiled. Everything which could be destroyed was made away with.

Then the army—that part of it which had not already slipped away piecemeal—set out on the retreat. The rout of the once confident body of troops was complete. Soon Braddock died, and after quickly burying his body the company pushed on eastward, nor did they stop—that is, the regulars—till they were safely housed in Philadelphia in winter quarters in the middle of summer.

There has always been a dispute among historians as to whether the dying Braddock or Dunbar gave the orders for the fearful destruction of supplies, but, whether it was the one or the other, on Dunbar rests the odium of the act, for Braddock was in such a condition when brought to Dunbar's camp that he would have been fully justified in assuming full command and disregarding everything his superiors might say. Dunbar has been called the Tardy, but there was certainly nothing slow about the way he left the frontier uncovered and fled to the safe precincts of Philadelphia.

the seashore, and he was strolling along with his valise in hand when he met Mr. Caterpillar.

Of course he had a great deal to say about the many sights he saw and the many things he did, and he entertained Mr. Caterpillar for fully seven minutes in this manner.

"Well," said Mr. Caterpillar, "you certainly did have a good time, judging from what you say. I would have liked to have been along with you. But did you hear the news?"

"No," replied Mr. Bug.

"There's a man at your house to collect the rent."

"Oh, my!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a cent!"

"And another to collect the grocer's bill."

"Wow!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a penny!"

"And another to collect the doctor's bill."

"Whew!" cried Mr. Bug. "I haven't a copper!"

"Then I guess they'll send you to jail," declared Mr. Caterpillar. "But you will have one consolation—you had a good time while you were away spending your money. Goodbye."

"Hold on!" cried Mr. Bug. "Don't leave me!"

"Oh, yes, I must," said Mr. Caterpillar. "I've got to take the money I saved by staying at home this year and pay my doctor and grocer and landlord."—Atlantic Constitution.

Lovers of Beauty.

The Japanese have a most charming custom which the Americans would do well in following. In the houses of the well to do there is always one room which is called "the chamber of the inspiring view," and from the windows of this room may be seen some beauty of nature, sometimes a glimpse of a winding river or pretty hills, and frequently it is no more than a blossoming cherry tree or an interrupted stretch of white snow, but in any case showing the simple love of the naturally beautiful. While we Americans give theater and dinner parties, the Japanese get up parties to visit the maple trees while they are resplendent in the autumn colors or to go mushroom hunting, and in the winter they go out into the country to view the fresh untrodden snow.—Detroit Tribune.

One of Falb's Predictions.

The Journal des Debats tells a story of Professor Rudolf Falb. In 1874 he predicted an eruption of Etna on Aug. 27. He offered a Vienna editor to write an account of it if the editor would send him to Sicily. Falb was commissioned. When he reached Etna there was not the slightest sign of disturbance. As the 27th approached Falb was tortured with anxiety and spent sleepless nights watching the volcano. Nothing happened on the 27th and 28th. The following morning the servant rushed into the professor's room shouting, "An eruption, a terrible eruption!" Falb saw the spectacle and sent off his dispatch.

LONDON THE AUTHOR

RAPID RISE OF A YOUNG GENIUS OF CALIFORNIA.

His New Book, "The Call of the Wild," Which Has Been Very Well Received—How He Became a Literary Man.

Since Kipling wrote his "Jungle Book" there have appeared various writers of "animal stories"—Thompson-Seton, William J. Long, Sewall Ford and others. Among the latest and most successful of these, though writing along different lines from any of his predecessors, is Jack London, a young Californian, whose sketches in the magazines first began to attract attention about three years ago. His latest story is "The Call of the Wild," just issued by Macmillan, of which the hero, Buck, is a dog, a noble animal of mixed St. Bernard and shepherd breed, and the story recounts the adventures that befell this gallant fellow in the wilds of Alaska.

Although Jack London is not yet twenty-seven years of age, he has crowded into the short space of his life experiences enough for half a century. He is the son of parents who wandered from eastern homes, meeting in California, where they were married and bequeathed to their son the pioneer and adventurous spirit which had actuated them. He was born in San Francisco on Jan. 12, 1876. The boy had a hard life, supporting himself by manual labor even before he had reached the age of nine years. He was not an ordinary boy, however, and what might have coarsened one of less strength of character was to him a valuable experience. Speaking of his early life, Mr. London recently said in an interview published in the Reader:

"Almost the first things I realized were responsibilities. I was wage earner as a ranch hand long before I was nine, when my mother moved to Oakland, where I worked as newsboy. After that I went with the oyster pirates and salmon fishermen along the Sacramento river. Some of these men were Greeks. The life was eventful, but strange and hard, the men, some of them, cutthroats. The San Francisco waterfront holds many phases of life and romance and danger.

"After a year or two I shipped as common sailor and went to Japan.

JACK LONDON.

When I came back I entered a cotton mill, where I worked from 5 in the morning until 11 at night. I had been to school some and had written compositions which had been praised—the usual thing, you know."

In 1894, when eighteen years of age, Mr. London tramped 10,000 miles through the United States and Canada, adopting for a time the vagrant life for purposes of sociological and economic study. Speaking of his experience as a tramp and its effect upon his life, Mr. London says:

"Before I took that tramp across the United States I loved hard work, loved to do it, wanted to throw myself into it, fairly gloried in manual labor. I accomplished more than I was paid for or expected to do from sheer love of it. In Buffalo I was arrested and thrown into jail as a tramp; my hair was clipped, and I was subjected to the regular tramp routine. There I saw that the workman was simply in the social pit, was literally holding on the sides with his hands, and I resolved then and there never to work again manually, for in that way man gets beneath the capitalist. From that day I was a socialist."

Returning to the home of his boyhood, Mr. London entered the University of California in 1896, but remained only a year, being obliged to give up his collegiate studies because of a lack of funds. About this time the Klondike was beginning to attract the mining prospector and gold seeker, and Mr. London's adventurous spirit led him thither. While unsuccessful in his search for gold, he accumulated there a fund of experience and information which has served as a basis for very much that he has written.

Upon his return from the Klondike Mr. London wrote "The Man on the Trail," which the Overland Magazine published in 1899. This first success was followed by eight other short stories, all of which, with one exception, were published in the Overland and were subsequently collected in book form under the title of "The Son of the Wolf," which brought him recognition from the literary world. Other stories by Mr. London are "The League of the Old Men," "The White Silence," "The God of His Fathers," "Daughter of the North," "The Children of the Frost," "Kempton-Wace Letters" and "The Call of the Wild," the last being considered his best work. It is at least attracting very general and favorable attention. The accommodations afforded by These ancient inns were such as would now be considered unendurable in many ways, but our sturdy ancestors bore with them bravely and managed to get along about as comfortably as we think we are now able to live. Good care was always taken of the traveler's horse, even at the expense of sometimes allowing the man to go not so well attended to, for the horse was then a more valuable member of society than he is today. Those were brave old days, but we would not have them back again. C. L. SMITH.

Queer Dreams.

A professor of mathematics dreamed that his son was under the radical sign, and he could not get him out. A Boston drawing teacher had a similar experience. She had been studying perspective one evening, and during the night her sister heard her groping about the room and opening and closing bureau drawers. "What are you hunting for, Mary?" inquired the sister. "Oh, dear," moaned the somnambulist, "I can't find the vanishing point!"—Christian Register.

Barnstable Fair. An annual fair at Barnstable, England, has been held for hundreds of years. It was originally held in July, but the time was altered to September by a charter granted by Queen Mary. Barnstable fair is inaugurated with a ceremony in the town hall, where a special meeting of the town council is held and spiced ale and toast (prepared in the council chamber by the beadle and mace bearers) are dispensed to all who crowd the building. Appropriate toasts are proposed and speeches made by the local member of parliament and others, after which the mayor proceeds in procession to three points of the town, at each of which is read his proclamation opening the fair and enjoining all concerned to keep the peace during its continuance. Not until this ceremony has been performed can the business and fun of the fair proceed. On the inauguration of the fair a huge stuffed white glove, adorned with flowers, is thrust on a pole from one of the upper windows of the town hall and remains in evidence during the continuance of the festival as the symbol of open handed welcome.

The Druggist Lost in Ibsen. Some one in Scandinavia unearthed the report of the examination on Dr. Ibsen's papers at his examination for the degree of bachelor. It runs as follows: Norwegian, good; Latin prose, good; Latin essay, fairly good; Latin conversation, moderate; Greek, bad; arithmetic, bad; German, very good; French, good; religious knowledge, good; history and geography, good; Hebrew, good; geometry, good. General remarks: A young man not to be despised. In spite of many "goods," however, Ibsen was plowed owing to his deficiencies in Greek and arithmetic. He aspired in those days to be a pharmaceutical chemist and, failing to satisfy the examiners, had to seek some other opening in life.

A Hard Problem.

A certain debating society is discussing the question as to which is the angrier—the husband who goes home and finds that the dinner is not ready or the wife who has dinner ready and whose husband does not come home. It is believed that the debate will end in a draw.

The Ethics of Fiction

By ANNE FITZHUGH MACLEAN

XL—The Effects of Success.

There is a fascination about the "dangers of success" in literature, as there is in the dangers of prosperity of any port. Every young writer is willing to take the risk of such dangers as every poor man is brave enough to undertake the responsibility of wealth. Yet the danger is so real as to be apparent to the casual eye, very grave and sometimes even fatal.

The prayer of Agur might be adapted for the use of authors, becoming, "Give me neither failure nor success," for failure is bad, too, and the medium is happy in popular applause, as it is in most other things. A novel

Frances Hodgson Burnett, too, tells us that it was under the spur of necessity that she wrote her most famous novel, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." But in these and similar cases we assume that the thinking out had been done before, if only by the gradual, unconscious evolution of the motif, so that there remained to be done only the arranging and setting down.

Judging by the nature of Scott's mentality, he was hurt less than most men would have been by his phenomenal success. The hurry in which he wrote was a temperamental defect. He said of himself that he always wished to be beginning his next book before he had finished the one he was upon. His unparalleled fertility of invention and facility of expression made patient concentration almost impossible. His lack of finish and the weakness of his conclusions are simply the faults that we must accept with his surpassing merit. While human nature is human nature every great, predominating natural virtue, of spirit or of intellect, will have its accompanying weakness.

It appears plain that even with the moderate success of the average writer of fiction Scott's novels would have the same defects that now mar their remarkable beauty, for the defects were in the man, in the very richness and exuberance of his genius, and could have been but slightly modified by conditions.

To Scott belongs the singular prestige of having written a sequel which was better than the book it supplanted. Ordinarily there is nothing quite so certainly foredoomed to failure as a sequel. It is usually the author's attempt to fasten the public favor obtained by a particularly attractive book, and one cannot achieve a second particularly attractive book merely by setting oneself the task, "Little Men" was an excellent book, well worth the writing, but it had not the magnetic fascination of "Little Women," because, alas, magnetic fascination is among the things that labor doesn't conquer. Scott's success in this dangerous field was largely due to his reversing the usual order and putting a sequel to his most unpopular book. To publish a second part to "The Monastery" (as "The Abbot") was one of the bravest things he ever did, and to win public approval thereby one of the most triumphant. But, despite the success of a few sequels, the writing of a sequel is still one of the most foolhardy methods of tampering with success.

There are novels in which the author has plainly planned a sequel; others which he has left in such shape that, if desirable, the story may be carried on without violence.

Everybody expected a sequel to "Sentimental Tommy," and most people got better than they expected. Writing as one who found Tommy too unpleasant to make agreeable reading, I may say the more forcibly that T. Sandys is the best development of manhood from childhood I have found in fiction.

This argues nothing in favor of sequels, for Mr. Barrie evidently had Tommy and Grizel full grown in his mind and did not invent their maturity in response to the popular demand. Failure is bad, but its worst result is cessation of effort. Success brings the greater danger that the flattered or avaricious author will be stimulated to premature production.

Lewis Carroll knew how to stand success. "Through the Looking Glass" equals "Alice in Wonderland." Indeed many of the quotations credited to the more famous book are really taken from his sequel.

Without knowing the inside history of Mrs. Burnett's two charming books, "A Lady of Quality" and "His Grace of Osmond," it is unfair to classify them as exceptions to the failure of sequels. Unless Mrs. Burnett had the conception of the second part of the story before the publication of the first, "His Grace of Osmond" is almost unique as a novel that equals—in the opinion of many surpasses—the book to which it is a sequel. To do better work after an overwhelming success means a tremendous force of character, as, for instance, what Mary E. Wilkins, who has reached her highest point yet in "The Portion of Labor," has done. For such an achievement genius is not enough. There must be, besides, the finest qualities of the soul—self control, self discipline, spiritual poise.

Great writers know the cost of excellent work; they know their limitations as well as their abilities. They must be intoxicated indeed by applause before they will be guilty of the folly and the wrong of writing simply to retain their hold upon the public fancy. Yet immense must be the temptation after a successful book to satisfy the clamor with anything that will hold attention while something as good as the book approved may be prepared.

The inundation includes a flood of offers from editors and publishers. Friends (self believed) warn the writer of the fickleness of public favor. Wealth as well as glory seems within easy grasp. The brain, stimulated by excitement and applause, deludes with the promise that it will be easy to write the "anything" demanded.

The author comes forward with a book hitherto considered too poor to print or writes something self-conscious, self initiative. The plea that the opportunity missed is gone forever is specious, but facts prove it untrue. The author of a deservedly successful book finds his audience ready to welcome him whenever he returns with another one as good. Richardson's career as a writer proves him a malignant man. His biographers credit him with an inordinate vanity, the only flaw in a character unusually blameless and amiable. True, he allowed himself to be plucked into his only failure, the sequel to "Pamela," but the vanity of a man who can go on, as he did, doing better and more laborious work in the face of a perfect tumult of applause and admiration is at least not inordinate. At any rate, if his vanity was great, his genius was all the greater.

Scott gives in a few words a test of the reality of a writer's success: "By the new efforts which they made (the patriarchs of literature) their errors were obliterated, they became identified with the literature of their country, and after having long received law from the critics they came in some degree to impose it."

To lay down the law for the critics! Isn't the chance of it, with its combination of triumph, well doing and sweet revenge, well worth the forfeit of ephemeral success?

SIENKIEWICZ IN ECLIPSE.

How the Polish Author Incurred the Wrath of His Countrymen.

Henry Sienkiewicz, the Polish author, who until recently was the idol of his compatriots, the entire Polish people having celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into literature, when they made him a present of a magnificent castle surrounded by a park, seems to have suffered a permanent eclipse in public esteem.

Not long ago a Warsaw paper asked Sienkiewicz what in his opinion was the best Polish drama of recent years.

He replied that all Polish literature was worthless. This reply caused a tremendous sensation and a great revulsion of feeling against the author, and since then he has been the object of violent attacks in the Polish press.

Sienkiewicz's most famous book, "Quo Vadis," which was translated into many languages, was published in 1896.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Learn to Be Contented

Sambo was tired of his kinky locks. He wanted straight hair like the white folks had.

So he had gone out behind the barn to grieve and complain, which, of course, was entirely wrong.

"I hate this plagued wool," he said, running his hand through his black corkscrew ringlets.

"Why can't a fellow's hair be decent and straight and silky? I can't go out but what some white boy yells, 'Hi, there, woolly!'"

"Wool ought not to grow on boys anyway. It's only meant for dirty old sheep, and they can't do nothing but lie round and blatt. Dey's des to 'count nobow.' And he got up to look at himself in a bit of broken mirror. But there had been some one listening to all this. Around the corner sat old Mr. Ram.

"Umph!" he said. "So he thinks that wool is only fit for no 'count' sheep, does he? And he's ashamed of his looks, is he? Well, I'd just like to show him that it isn't what a fellow looks like, but what he is, that counts. I believe I will give him a lesson in manners anyway. It isn't polite to remark on people's appearance behind their backs, and he called me 'dirty sheep.'"

With that he gave one loud "Bah!" and, ducking his head, went for Sambo.

My, how that little darky ran!

It was a long way to the fence, and before he made it the ram had caught him and lifted him over into the potato patch on the other side. He lit on his head, but got up instantly, scared, but unharmed. "My," said Sambo reflectively, "if it hadn't been for my wool I'd 'a' got hurt!"

"Of course you would, impudence," said the ram. "Maybe now you won't complain about the way the Lord made you."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Business Precaution.

A caller at the boarding house of Mrs. Irons was surprised to see a fine greyhound basking in the sun outside the kitchen door. "I didn't know you had a dog," she said. "He's a beautiful animal. How long have you had him?"

"Two or three years."

"How does it happen I have never seen him in passing along here?"

"We don't allow him to leave the back yard," replied Mrs. Irons, with emphasis. "What kind of an advertisement would it be for a boarding house to have a creature as lean as that dog standing round in front of it?"

The Ethics of Fiction

By ANNE FITZHUGH MACLEAN

XL—The Effects of Success.

There is a fascination about the "dangers of success" in literature, as there is in the dangers of prosperity of any port. Every young writer is willing to take the risk of such dangers as every poor man is brave enough to undertake the responsibility of wealth. Yet the danger is so real as to be apparent to the casual eye, very grave and sometimes even fatal.

The prayer of Agur might be adapted for the use of authors, becoming, "Give me neither failure nor success," for failure is bad, too, and the medium is happy in popular applause, as it is in most other things. A novel with a sudden popularity spreading in modern American fashion over the whole land is tolerably sure to be followed by another from the same hand so amazingly bad that even the impetus of the tidal wave is insufficient to sweep it into public approval. The writer's only possibility of success in his second venture lies in imitating himself as a caricature imitates its original. His pathos becomes bathos, his wit pertness, his satire mere brutality.

Mary E. Wilkins.
[Who did better work after an overwhelming success.]

Sir Walter Scott has written so entertainingly on his own experience in this connection, principally in the introduction to "The Abbot," that there is temptation to quote him wholesale when discussing the ethics of literary success. The "introductions" to Scott's novels form altogether a delightful commentary upon romantic literature and are unique as an exposition of the methods and the mental attitude of a great novelist. To the student, but especially to one who himself desires to write fiction, they are as valuable as the novels themselves, the more valuable in that Scott combined with the spontaneity of genius the routine industry of a commercial or industrial worker. Speaking of his comparative failure in "The Monastery" and speaking with that beautiful modesty and kindness of feeling which so strikingly characterized his printed utterances, he sets the standard for writers who are in peril of popular favor: "I was conscious that in my situation not to advance was in some degree to recede, and, being naturally unwilling to think that the principle of decay lay in myself, I was at least desirous to know of a certainty whether the degree of discountenance which I had incurred was now owing to an ill managed story or an ill chosen subject."

Scott did not do well under pressure. It may be doubted whether any writer does—whether there is an authentic instance of a really good book produced under immediate need of money which only success is able to supply. The most celebrated of such cases is Dr. Johnson's writing "Rasselas" to pay for his mother's funeral.

Frances Hodgson Burnett, too, tells us that it was under the spur of necessity that she wrote her most famous novel, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." But in these and similar cases we assume that the thinking out had been done before, if only by the gradual, unconscious evolution of the motif, so that there remained to be done only the arranging and setting down.

Judging by the nature of Scott's mentality, he was hurt less than most men would have been by his phenomenal success. The hurry in which he wrote was a temperamental defect. He said of himself that he always wished to be beginning his next book before he had finished the one he was upon. His unparalleled fertility of invention and facility of expression made patient concentration almost impossible. His lack of finish and the weakness of his conclusions are simply the faults that we must accept with his surpassing merit. While human nature is human nature every great, predominating natural virtue, of spirit or of intellect, will have its accompanying weakness.

It appears plain that even with the moderate success of the average writer of fiction Scott's novels would have the same defects that now mar their remarkable beauty, for the defects were in the man, in the very richness and exuberance of his genius, and could have been but slightly modified by conditions.

To Scott belongs the singular prestige of having written a sequel which was better than the book it supplemented. Ordinarily there is nothing quite so certainly foredoomed to failure as a sequel. It is usually the author's attempt to fasten the public favor obtained by a particularly attractive book, and one cannot achieve a second particularly attractive book merely by setting oneself the task. "Little Men" was an excellent book, well worth the writing, but it had not the magnetic fascination of "Little Women," because, alas, magnetic fascination is among the things that labor doesn't conquer. Scott's success in this dangerous field was largely due to his reversing the usual order and putting a sequel to his most unpopular book. To publish a second part to "The Monastery" (as "The Abbot") was one of the bravest things he ever did, and to win public approval thereby one of the most triumphant. But, despite the success of a few sequels, the writing of a sequel is still one of the most foolhardy methods of tampering with success.

There are novels in which the author has plainly planned a sequel; others which he has left in such shape that, if desirable, the story may be carried on without violence.

Everybody expected a sequel to "Sentimental Tommy," and most people got better than they expected. Writing as one who found Tommy too unpleasant to make agreeable reading, I may say the more forcibly that T. Sandys is the best development of manhood from childhood I have found in fiction.

This argues nothing in favor of sequels, for Mr. Barrie evidently had Tommy and Grizel full grown in his mind and did not invent their maturity in response to the popular demand. Failure is bad, but its worst result is cessation of effort. Success brings the greater danger that the flattered or avaricious author will be stimulated to premature production.

Levins Carroll knew how to stand success. "Through the Looking Glass" equals "Alice in Wonderland." Indeed many of the quotations credited to the more famous book are really taken from its sequel.

Without knowing the inside history of Mrs. Burnett's two charming books, "A Lady of Quality" and "His Grace of Osmond," it is unfair to classify them as exceptions to the failure of sequels. Unless Mrs. Burnett had the conception of the second part of the story before the publication of the first, "His Grace of Osmond" is almost unique as a novel that equals—in the opinion of many surpluses—the book to which it is a sequel. To do better work after an overwhelming success means a tremendous force of character, as, for instance, what Mary E. Wilkins, who has reached her highest point yet in "The Portion of Labor," has done. For such an achievement genius is not enough. There must be, besides, the finest qualities of the soul—self control, self discipline, spiritual poise.

Great writers know the cost of excellent work; they know their limitations as well as their abilities. They must be intoxicated indeed by applause before they will be guilty of the folly and the wrong of writing simply to retain their hold upon the public fancy. Yet immense must be the temptation after a successful book to satisfy the clamor with anything that will hold attention while something as good as the book approved may be prepared.

The inundation includes a flood of offers from editors and publishers. Friends (self believed) warn the writer of the fickleness of public favor. Wealth as well as glory seems within easy grasp. The brain, stimulated by excitement and applause, deludes with the promise that it will be easy to write the "anything" demanded.

The author comes forward with a book hitherto considered too poor to print or writes something self-conscious, self imitative. The plea that the opportunity missed is gone forever is specious, but facts prove it untrue. The author of a deservedly successful book finds his audience ready to welcome him whenever he returns with another one as good. Richardson's career as a writer proves him a malignant jester. His biographers credit him with an inordinate vanity, the only flaw in a character unusually blameless and amiable. True, he allowed himself to be piqued into his only failure, the sequel to "Pamela," but the vanity of a man who can go on, as he did, doing better and more laborious work in the face of a perfect tumult of applause and admiration is at least not inordinate. At any rate, if his vanity was great, his genius was all the greater.

Scott gives in a few words a test of the reality of a writer's success: "By the new efforts which they made (the patriarchs of literature) their errors were obliterated, they became identified with the literature of their country, and after having long received law from the critics they came in some degree to impose it."

To lay down the law for the critics? Isn't the chance of it, with its combination of triumph, well doing and sweet revenge, well worth the forfeit of ephemeral success?

SIENKIEWICZ IN ECLIPSE.

How the Polish Author Incurred the Wrath of His Countrymen.

Henry Sienkiewicz, the Polish author, who until recently was the idol of his compatriots, the entire Polish people having celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into literature, when they made him a present of a magnificent castle surrounded by a park, seems to have suffered a permanent eclipse in public esteem.

Not long ago a Warsaw paper asked Sienkiewicz what in his opinion was the best Polish drama of recent years.

Henry Sienkiewicz. The author replied that all Polish literature was worthless. This reply caused a tremendous sensation and a great revulsion of feeling against the author, and since then he has been the object of violent attacks in the Polish press. Sienkiewicz's most famous book, "Quo Vadis," which was translated into many languages, was published in 1896.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Learn to Be Contented

Sambo was tired of his kinky locks. He wanted straight hair like the white folks had. So he had gone out behind the barn to grieve and complain, which, of course, was entirely wrong. "I hate this plagued wool," he said, running his hand through his black corkscrew ringlets. "Why can't a fellow's hair be decent and straight and silky? I can't go out but what some white boy yells, 'Hi, there, wooly!'"

"Wool ought not to grow on boys anyway. It's only meant for dirty old sheep, and they can't do nothing but lie round and blatt. Dey's des no 'count nobow.' And he got up to look at himself in a bit of broken mirror. But there had been some one listening to all this. Around the corner sat old Mr. Ram. "Umph!" he said. "So he thinks that wool is only fit for 'no 'count' sheep, does he? And he's ashamed of his locks, is he? Well, I'd just like to show him that it isn't just a fellow looks like, but what he is, that counts. I believe I will give him a lesson in manners anyway. It isn't polite to mark on people's appearance behind their backs, and he called me 'dirty sheep.' With that he gave one loud 'Bah!' and, ducking his head, went for Sambo. My, how that little darky ran! It was a long way to the fence, and before he made it he ran had caught him and lifted him over into the potato patch on the other side. He lit on his head, but got up instantly, scared, but unharmed. "My," said Sambo reflectively, "if it hadn't been for my wool I'd 'a' got hurt!"

"Of course you would, impudence," said the ram. "Maybe now you won't complain about the way the Lord made you."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Business Precaution. A caller at the boarding house of Mrs. Irons was surprised to see a fine greyhound basking in the sun outside the kitchen door. "I didn't know you had a dog," she said. "He's a beautiful animal. How long have you had him?"

"Two or three years." "How does it happen I have never seen him in passing along here?" "We don't allow him to leave the back yard," replied Mrs. Irons, with emphasis. "What kind of an advertisement would it be for a boarding house to have a creature as lean as that dog standing round in front of it?"

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM

National League Holding Twenty-Third Annual Meeting in Baltimore.

NOTABLE DELEGATES PRESENT

Competitive Examinations Result in Selection of Men of High Moral Standards—Merit versus Spoils System—Law Vigorously Enforced.

Baltimore, Dec. 11.—The National Civil Service Reform League began its twenty-third annual meeting. Daniel C. Gilman, president of the league, opened the convention with a few appropriate remarks.

Among the notable delegates present were Carl Schurz, Edward Wheeler, Homer Folks and Edward Carey, of New York; James R. Garfield and W. E. Cushing, of Ohio; Richard Henry Dana, Charles J. Bonaparte, John R. Proctor, Charles Richardson, Elliott H. Goodwin, Alfred W. Cooley, Henry W. Greene, Henry W. Farnham and William D. Foulkes. Many of the delegates are accompanied by their wives.

Evils of Spoils Politics.

The annual report of the council was read by Charles J. Bonaparte. The report points to the recent revelations of dishonesty in certain bureaus of the postoffice department as an illustration of the evils of spoils politics. "Of the 18 public servants," says the report, "indicted for alleged crimes revealed by this investigation, not one originally entered the service through competitive examination. In every instance their selection was due to partisan or personal considerations. Ordinarily a man who enters the service as the result of a competitive examination honestly conducted in accordance with the civil service rules is a man of higher moral standards than a man appointed to office because he has placed a politician under obligations to him. There have been many illustrations of this truth, but none more striking or significant than the revelations of the postal inquiry."

The report states that in the Philippines the civil service law and rules are faithfully and satisfactorily administered, but that in Porto Rico "only a very partial application of the principles of the merit system seems to be contemplated, though a good beginning has been made."

Evasions of the Law.

Critical allusions were made to evasions of the civil service law in custom houses in Philadelphia and New York. The report concludes as follows: "The council feels confident that the great advances made in the practical application of its principles during the 23 years of its existence will be continued until avowed opposition to these principles has wholly disappeared, and it urges upon all members of the league and patriotic citizens and friends of honest government a resolute and persevering advocacy of the reform under all circumstances and in all parts of the union."

Charles Richardson, of Philadelphia, read a paper on "The needs of greater efforts and effective methods in advocating the merit system," in which he advised all those opposed to the spoils system to vote only for those pledged to civil service reform.

Richard Henry Dana, of Massachusetts, read a paper on "The merit system in the selection of the higher municipal officers," in which attention was called to the system in vogue in Paris as one of the best-governed cities in the world. "Government in our large cities is," he said, "a failure, and the remedy was in the application of the rules of civil service to the heads of departments instead of to the subordinates."

Parisian System Reversed Here.
"In Paris," said Mr. Dana, "they have put the heads and those near the head only of their municipal system under the merit plan, and the bodies—the subordinates—take care of themselves. We have put the bodies under the merit system, and have left the heads of departments in politics. Consequently the heads are mostly spoilsmen."

"Some Object Lessons" was the title of an address delivered by Carl Schurz, of New York, in which he dwelt at length on the Bristow report of scandals in the postoffice department. Senator Platt's party management in New York and of the acts of certain congressmen as illustrating the evils of spoils politics, and predicted the final and complete triumph of civil service reform.

Alfred W. Cooley, member of the United States civil service commission, followed with an address in which he said: "Thanks to President Roosevelt, the commission is stronger today than ever in its history, and that never before has the law been so thoroughly and vigorously enforced."

Senator Made an L.L.D.
Green Castle, Ind., Dec. 11.—Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who delivered the principal address at the exercises in connection with the inauguration of Dr. Edwin Holt Hughes as president of DePauw university, had the degree of L.L.D. conferred upon him by the institution.

Mrs. McKnight Gets Life Sentence.
Cadillac, Mich., Dec. 11.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Mary McKnight, who was on trial for the poisoning of her brother, John Murphy, returned a verdict of murder. She was at once sentenced to life imprisonment.

London, Dec. 11.—A fire occurred at Sandringham and Queen Alexandra and her secretary, Miss Knollys, had narrow escapes. She was awakened by Miss Knollys, who also raised an alarm. But

REDUCTION IN WAGES

Will Be Asked Ohio Miners at Operators' Meeting.

Cleveland, Dec. 11.—A meeting of the coal operators and miners of the districts of Ohio, Pittsburgh district, West Virginia, Indiana and Illinois, will be held in Cleveland early next week.

The meeting will be to learn if some method cannot be devised whereby the output of coal need not be curtailed. It is understood that the miners will be asked to accept a reduction in wages, so that the price of coal may be reduced and the demand stimulated.

The miners will probably be represented by their national and district leaders. The operators are said to have outlined a plan to submit to the workmen. If the men accept the proposition of a reduction in wages without protest the operators will endeavor to continue running their mines at full capacity. If the proposition is not accepted it is said that the operators will reduce the output equal to a month's production from all the mines in the districts named.

A local coal operator acquainted with the situation states that the mine owners have been contending against adverse conditions because of the curtailment in manufacturing, the introduction of electric power and other causes which reduced the consumption of coal.

An agreement between the miners and operators regarding a wage scale continues in force until April, so that the consent of the workmen is necessary to a proposition to reduce wages.

Want Game Laws Repealed.

Cleveland, Dec. 11.—The Ohio hotelmen's association, in convention here, appointed a committee to work for the repeal of the Ohio game laws. The state legislature will be asked to carry out this proposition at its coming session. The hotel men state that the game laws are absurd, hurtful to their business, and of benefit only to the game warden. At the business meeting Nicholas A. Court, of the Chittenden hotel, Columbus, was elected president of the association.

Portsmouth, O., Dec. 11.—Moses Johnson, convicted of murder in the first degree for killing Edward Test, an insurance agent, was sentenced to be electrocuted on March 26, 1904, and was taken at once to the annex of the Ohio penitentiary. Rufus Burcham, Johnson's alleged accomplice in the crime, is now being tried.

Married With His Hat On.

Maude Adams, In "The Pretty Sister of Jose,"
Is as Charming as Ever. "The Light
That Failed" A Success.

Maude Adams is a delectable bit of femininity—by the way, that always has been the case—in her new play at the Empire theater, "The Pretty Sister of Jose." She adorns the role of Pepita, a Spanish country girl, with a grace and an atmosphere of poetic inspiration that cast a magic spell over her audience, and the role must be added to her already long list of thoroughly artistic interpretations.

"The Pretty Sister of Jose" is a play in four acts written by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the well known authoress, and based on her book of the same name.

The play is an interesting and at the same time correct portrayal of life

MAUDE ADAMS.

(From a study in black and white.)
In Spain and climaxes with scenes of emotional intensity of an advanced description. Miss Adams' return to what Francis Wilson would term "the metropolis" resulted in an unqualified ovation, a triumph, and her scores of friends and admirers greeted her with a warmth of appreciation that for a moment threatened to unnerve the dainty star of high comedy.

Henry Ainley, Miss Adams' leading man, in the roll of Sebastiano, the bullfighter, is effective and convincing at all times.

Pepita goes to Madrid to visit her brother Jose (Edgar Selwyn). She hears much of the fame of Sebastiano, a bullfighter whose ability in the arena is only equaled by the ease with which he captures the hearts of admiring women. Pepita is told that she, too, will be attracted by the charms of the great hero of the populace. Everywhere she hears his praise. Pepita, however, vows that she will prove harder even than the proverbial adamant should she be brought into contact with the killer of bulls.

Sebastiano finally meets Pepita. He falls desperately in love with her. She turns him aside, although she, too, has learned to love him.

The bullfighter is afterward badly gored in the arena by an infuriated animal. He is carried to a room in a nearby hostelry and put in bed, as physicians say, to die unless a miracle saves him. Pepita makes her way to his room in the dead of night. Padre Alejandro leaves her alone with Sebastiano. The wounded man is unconscious. Pepita speaks to him and, receiving no answer, prays to a figure of the Virgin, pledging herself to a thousand years in purgatory if she will only keep alive the faint spark of life in the bullfighter's breast. As the dawn breaks her prayer is answered. Sebastiano moves, opens his eyes, reaches out his arms, and Pepita throws herself across his breast.

"The Light That Failed," at the Knickerbocker theater, shows Forbes Robertson in a role that gives splendid opportunities for effective work. He does not fall short of expectation and pictures the blighted career of Dick Helder realistically and at the same time artistically.

Gertrude Elliott's ability, so far as this play is concerned, appears to be overshadowed by her personal beauty and charm. She does not cause the role of Maisie to stand out with distinctness.

"The Light That Failed" in its dramatized form differs somewhat from the original story, written by Rudyard Kipling, but in the main it is very similar.

The play consists of a prologue and three acts. The opening scene shows a war correspondent's tent on the outskirts of a British camp in the Sudan, and here we first see Helder, with a bandage tied about his head to protect his eyes (which are succumbing to ophthalmia) from the sun. Here also we meet Torpenhow (C. Aubrey Smith), the correspondent, whose life is to be closely interwoven with that of Helder. In the first act is shown Maisie's studio, Ponomova House, London, in which we learn that this estimable young woman has ambition—an ambition that at this time is stronger than her regard for her childhood companion, Dick Helder, who loves her with all the intensity of a strong man's passion. Here also are introduced Bessie Broke (Auriol Lee), who is destined to ruin Helder's artistic masterpiece, his prized painting, and the Red Haired Girl (Ruth Berkeley), whose real name (in fiction) we will probably never know. Bessie Broke is carried into Maisie's studio by Helder. She is a gutter snipe and is promised a chance to earn an honest living by posing for Dick.

Helder's studio is shown in act 2 and in scene 2, act 3. It is there that the most stirring action occurs. It is the scene of Bessie's complications with Torpenhow, the destruction of the painting, the attack of absolute blindness on Helder, the merrymaking of the war correspondents and the final reunion of Dick and Maisie, she having been brought back to England by Torpenhow from France, where she had gone to paint her beloved picture, a Melancholia.

Mr. Smith is excellent as Torpenhow, as also is Miss Lee as Bessie Broke, who is, however, a bit staid at times.

Frederick Villiers, the well known English war artist-correspondent, superintended the arrangement of the camp scene in the prologue.

An arrangement was made recently between Charles Frohman and Liebler & Co. whereby Miss Robinson is to appear in the Zangwill play, "Merely Mary Ann," in one of Frohman's London theaters for an indefinite run.

This stipulation of an indefinite run will, it is conceded, afford Miss Robinson an opportunity of grounding herself firmly in the favor of the British public, as if "Merely Mary Ann" proves acceptable with the American actress, there is no telling how long Miss Robinson may remain on the other side.

The Zangwill comedy has been eminently successful in the west and will make its New York bow Jan. 4 at the Garden theater.

Authoritative announcements have been made to the effect that at the close of the present season De Wolf Hopper will sever his business relations with Everett R. Reynolds and will fly the colors of Sam S. & Lee Shubert.

The Messrs. Shubert have been negotiating for the services of the lanky comedian for several weeks, and the deal is now understood to have been formally completed. Their plans for Mr. Hopper's future have been but vaguely formed, but include his appearance in an opera built around the character of Falstaff. The work will take its title from this character.

Over two months ago it was announced that Mr. Hopper would shelve "Mr. Pickwick" after the holidays and appear in a new production by Victor Herbert and Glen McDonough. Whether this is the vehicle which the Messrs. Shubert have procured is not known at present.

Mr. Hopper's contract with Mr. Reynolds expires at the end of the current season. As long ago as last spring Mr.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM

National League Holding Twenty-Third Annual Meeting in Baltimore.
NOTABLE DELEGATES PRESENT
Competitive Examinations Result in Selection of Men of High Moral Standards—Merit versus Spoils System—Law Vigorously Enforced.

Baltimore, Dec. 11.—The National Civil Service Reform league began its twenty-third annual meeting. Daniel C. Gilman, president of the league, opened the convention with a few appropriate remarks.
Among the notable delegates present were Carl Schurz, Edward Wheeler, Homer Folks and Edward Carey, of New York; James R. Garfield and W. E. Cushing, of Ohio; Richard Henry Dana, Charles J. Bonaparte, John R. Proctor, Charles Richardson, Elliott H. Goodwin, Alfred W. Cooley, Henry W. Greene, Henry W. Farnham and William D. Foulkes. Many of the delegates are accompanied by their wives.
Evils of Spoils Politics.
The annual report of the council was read by Charles J. Bonaparte. The report points to the recent revelations of dishonesty in certain bureaus of the postoffice department as an illustration of the evils of spoils politics. "Of the 18 public servants," says the report, "indicted for alleged crimes revealed by this investigation, not one originally entered the service through competitive examination. In every instance their selection was due to partisan or personal considerations. Ordinarily a man who enters the service as the result of a competitive examination honestly conducted in accordance with the civil service rules is a man of higher moral standards than a man appointed to office because he has placed a politician under obligations to him. There have been many illustrations of this truth, but none more striking or significant than the revelations of the postal inquiry."

The report states that in the Philippines the civil service law and rules are faithfully and satisfactorily administered, but that in Porto Rico "only a very partial application of the principles of the merit system seems to be contemplated, though a good beginning has been made."
Evasions of the Law.
Critical allusions were made to evasions of the civil service law in custom houses in Philadelphia and New York. The report concludes as follows: "The council feels confident that the great advances made in the practical application of its principles during the 23 years of its existence will be continued until avowed opposition to these principles has wholly disappeared, and it urges upon all members of the league and patriotic citizens and friends of honest government a resolute and persevering advocacy of the reform under all circumstances and in all parts of the union."

Charles Richardson, of Philadelphia, read a paper on "The needs of greater efforts and effective methods in advocating the merit system." In which he advised all those opposed to the spoils system to vote only for those pledged to civil service reform.
Richard Henry Dana, of Massachusetts, read a paper on "The merit system in the selection of the higher municipal officers," in which attention was called to the system in vogue in Paris as one of the best-governed cities in the world. "Government in our large cities is," he said, "a failure, and the remedy was in the application of the rules of civil service to the heads of departments instead of to the subordinates."

Parisian System Reversed Here.
"In Paris," said Mr. Dana, "they have put the heads and those near the head only of their municipal system under the merit plan, and the bodies—the subordinates—take care of themselves. We have put the bodies under the merit system and have left the heads of departments in politics. Consequently the heads are mostly spoils-men."
"Some Object Lessons" was the title of an address delivered by Carl Schurz, of New York, in which he dwelt at length on the Bristow report of scandals in the postoffice department. Senator Platt's party management in New York and of the acts of certain congressmen as illustrating the evils of spoils politics, and predicted the final and complete triumph of civil service reform.

Alford W. Cooley, member of the United States civil service commission, followed with an address in which he said: "Thanks to President Roosevelt, the commission is stronger today than ever in its history, and that never before has the law been so thoroughly and vigorously enforced."
Senator Made an L.L.D.
